

Contents

	Acknowledgments	xi
	Introduction: Optimizing Optimism	1
PART I:	Projection	21
	1939–1948: The Socialist Prospective	21
1	Socialism and Lifestyle: The Intellectual Road to the Optimum Dwelling	29
2	Reasonable Consumption: The Necessism Group and the Rationalizing of Needs	59
PART II:	Production	83
	1948–1958: Drawing the Curtain	83
3	Architecture for All: Nationalization of Czechoslovakia’s Architecture	89
4	All for Architecture: Determinants of Architecture and of Architectural Authors	122
5	One Building for All: The Czechoslovak Brussels Pavilion	147
PART III:	Experimentation	181
	1958–1968: Reform from Within	181
6	An Avant-Garde for All: “Without Legends and Myths”	187

7	Not an Avant-Garde: The Emergence of SIAL from Stavoprojekt Liberec	207
8	Experiments in Free Time and Play: Liberec, circa 1966	239
Postscript
	Turning "Máj" Into "My"	269
	Bibliography	277
	Index	303