

CONTENTS

List of Figures	xiv
List of Tables	xiv
List of Abbreviations	xvi

1. Introduction: a Social Science Theory for the 21st Century	1
A new perspective
The four main tenets of preference theory
Modern society
Reinstating preferences as a causal factor
Britain and the USA as case-studies
Plan of the book
Future changes
2. The Failure to Predict	22
Prediction versus post hoc explanation
→ The male bias of labour market theory
→ Feminist contributions
Methodological considerations
→ Conclusions
3. Causes of the New Scenario	43
The contraceptive revolution
Voluntary childlessness
The equal opportunities revolution
The expansion of white-collar and service work
The creation of jobs for secondary earners
→ Lifestyle choices in rich modern societies
Conclusions
4. The Polarization of Preferences and Behaviour	84
The polarization of sex-role preferences
Does higher education make a difference?
Polarization of attitudes within the workforce
The polarization of women's employment
Continuity and change in income-earning roles
The polarization of household income
Contradictory evidence: rising workrates
→ Conclusions

5. Things are Different in the Younger Generations: Evidence from Longitudinal Studies	128
The 1958 cohort study—NCDS
Educational attainment
Earnings and the pay gap
Aspirations and sex-role ideology
The financial dependence of wives
Life satisfaction and psychological distress
Younger generations in the USA
Conclusions
6. Heterogeneous Preferences	157
Home-centred women and the marriage career
Work-centred women and the voluntary childfree
Adaptive women: drifters and unplanned careers
Social constraints and contextual influences
Cross-national comparisons
Conflicting interests
Contradictory evidence: female depression
Sources of the three preferences
Conclusions
7. Marriage Markets and Educational Equality	193
Marriage markets
The qualifications gap and educational equality
Educational homogamy of spouses
Role segregation and family relationships
Conclusions
8. Policy Applications	223
The rhetoric and reality of pronatalist policies
Policies for home-centred women
Policies for adaptive women
Policies for work-centred women
Employer and trade union policies
Conclusions
9. Preferences among Men	254
The work-lifestyle preferences of men
Enduring sex differences
The globalization of marriage markets
Male responses to the new scenario
Conclusions

10. Conclusions	273
Work-lifestyle preferences in the 21st century
Beyond sex and gender
Explanations for patriarchy and its success
Methodological implications
Cross-national comparisons
Theorizing social change
References	290
Index	324