This study is based primarily on the collections of two wonderful institutions, the British Library and the Herzog August Bibliothek. It was a pleasure to spend a year at each, first in London and later in Wolfenbüttel and I am especially grateful to Dr. Jutta Bepler at the Herzog August Bibliothek for her kindness during my many visits. I have likewise appreciated the opportunities to discuss Reformation research, and especially Carion's Chronicle, with Dr. Helmut Giese, retired director of the Gotha Forschungsbibliothek. In my younger days, Dr. Ruth Robbie-Brown, Prof. Daniel M. Geuechlande, and Dr. Wolfgang Röhl all encouraged my training in European cultural history. More recently, I wish to thank Prof. Andrew Pettegree, Prof. Bridget Hezel and Prof. Brigitte Einöde for their support in adding this book to the St. Andrews Studies in Reformation History series at Brill.

Over the years, I have received encouragement from family and many friends, both in the States and in Europe, who always remained interested in my engagement with the distant past. The writing of this book has been a
