

Contents

Series editor's preface	viii
Preface	xiii
Part I Reconstruction of educational case study	1
1 Why educational case study should be reconstructed	3
My experience as an examiner of master's dissertations and doctoral theses	5
My experience of research in the public domain	7
My writing and thinking about research	11
A reconstruction of case study	12
2 An example of a theory-seeking case study leading to fuzzy     propositions	14
Theory in initial teacher education: some BEd students' perspectives on its utility in 1996	14
3 What is case study?	22
Towards a science of the singular	22
Descriptions of case study given by different writers	23
Types of case study described by various writers	27
How the problem of generalization is approached by different writers	30
Academic criticisms of case study	34
Endpiece	35
4 Locating educational case study on the map of research in     education	37
What is 'education'?	37
What is research?	38
What is educational research?	38
What is discipline research in educational settings?	39

What is empirical research, and what are its categories?	40
How do different beliefs in the nature of reality affect educational case study?	42
What are scientific, statistical and fuzzy generalizations?	44
What is a study of a singularity?	47
5 How some case study research can be disseminated through fuzzy generalization and professional discourse	48
'Do y instead of x and your pupils will learn more'	48
Research feeds discourse, which aids practice and policy	49
Fuzzy generalizations as sound bites from research	51
Examples of fuzzy generalizations	53
Putting research reports on the Internet	54
Endpiece	55
6 Educational case study as a prime strategy for developing educational theory which illuminates educational policy and enhances educational practice	57
A conceptual reconstruction of educational case study	57
Rationale for the elements of the reconstruction	59
The categorization of case study in this reconstruction	62
7 Methods of enquiry and the conduct of case study research	65
Introduction	65
Stages in conducting case study research	65
The ethics of research	73
Trustworthiness in case study research	74
Respect for persons in case study research	77
Archive, case record and case report	79
Data collection methods	81
Data analysis	83
Writing case reports	84
Audit certificate	90
Part II Examples of case studies	93
Preamble	93
8 The Nottinghamshire Staff Development Project 1985–1987: a story-telling case study about an evaluation	95
Abstract	95
Introduction	95
Section 1	97
Section 2	110

9 Classroom organization in primary schools: a story-telling case study about three theory-seeking case studies and a theory-testing survey	116
Abstract	116
Introduction	116
A day in Mrs M's classroom: a theory-seeking case study	117
A day in Mrs W's classroom: a theory-seeking case study	126
A day in Mr A's classroom: a theory-seeking case study	140
A theory of classroom organizational strategies	151
Endpiece	156
10 What it is like to be a student on final teaching practice: a picture-drawing case study of fiction firmly based on fact	158
Abstract	158
Preamble	158
Introduction	159
How the findings were reported	160
Internal evidence of trustworthiness	162
External evidence of trustworthiness	172
Endpiece	173
References	174
Index	177