

Contents

List of figures	xiii
Preface	xv
Acknowledgements	xix

PART I

Disputable natures

1	Naturalness	3
1.0	Introduction: the dubious status of naturalness	3
1.1	General motivation	6
1.2	'Naturalness': the semantic job	11
1.3	Nature: constructivism, epistemology and ontology	22
1.4	Following nature?	26
	References	40
2	'No Naturalness, only Nature'	44
2.0	Introduction	44
2.1	Aristotle: "existing by nature"	45
2.2	Fixed beings	48
2.3	Understanding today's concept of naturalness	50
2.4	Essentialism: John Locke	53
2.5	Humeanism	60
2.6	The experiment	65
2.7	Science: from in-vitro to in-vivo	67
2.8	Reservations	73
2.9	No naturalness, only nature	76
	References	81

PART II

A positive concept of naturalness

85

3 Dispositions

87

3.0 Introducing dispositions 87

3.1 Real potentiality? 89

3.2 Categorical properties 92

3.3 Problems for the dispositional monist 99

3.4 Combined views 103

3.5 The categorical and dispositional revised 107

3.6 Modified neutral monism 109

References 113

4 Dispositions and relational realism

115

4.0 Introduction: relational realism 115

4.1 Reductionism and intrinsicity 116

4.2 Relational realism 119

4.3 Reciprocal dispositional partners 122

4.4 The combinatorial puzzle 123

4.5 "Relational problems" 130

4.6 Towards a relational account of dispositions 142

4.7 The nature of things 148

References 152

5 Rethinking naturalness

154

5.0 Introduction 154

5.1 Logical and de re possibility 154

5.2 HEDFs 156

5.3 Possible-I and possible-N 159

5.4 Containment and possible-I 160

5.5 It is possible-I, but is it possible-N? 166

5.6 Naturalness and dispositions 168

5.7 New eyes on environmental ethics 173

References 181

6	Naturalness in ecology and wilderness stewardship	182
6.0	Introduction	182
6.1	Naturalness, ecology and wilderness	182
6.2	Botkin and balance in nature	199
6.3	Wilderness stewardship	204
6.4	Ecology, dispositions and naturalness	207
	References	213

Index	216
-------	-----