

Contents

Introduction	7
Part One THE PIONEERS	19
1 F. Galton (1892) Classification of men according to their natural gifts	21
2 C. Spearman (1904) 'General intelligence': objectively determined and measured	33
3 C. Spearman (1927) The doctrine of two factors	58
Part Two DEVELOPMENT AND APPLICATION	69
4 T. L. Kelley (1928) The boundaries of mental life	71
5 C. L. Hull (1928) The basic constitution of aptitude	90
6 G. Thomson (1936) Intelligence and civilisation	115
Part Three WHAT IS INTELLIGENCE?	131
7 G. Ryle (1949) Knowing how and knowing that	133
8 T. R. Miles (1957) On defining intelligence	159
Part Four STRUCTURE OF THE MIND	177
9 P. E. Vernon (1950) The hierarchy of ability	179
10 C. Burt (1949) The structure of the mind	193

11	J. P. Guilford (1959) Three faces of intellect	218
	Part Five NATURE VERSUS NURTURE	239
12	D. O. Hebb (1949) The growth and decline of intelligence	243
13	C. Burt (1955) The evidence for the concept of intelligence	260
14	L. Erlenmeyer-Kimling and L. F. Jarvik (1963) Genetics and intelligence	282
	Part Six WIDER IMPLICATIONS	287
15	G. A. Ferguson (1954) Learning and human ability	289
16	P. R. Hofstaetter (1954) The changing composition of intelligence	308
17	J. McV. Hunt (1961) Intelligence and experience	314
	Further Reading	357
	Acknowledgements	358
	Author Index	361
	Subject Index	365