

Contents

List of Tables x

Preface xi

1. Grammaticalization and the History of Chinese Syntax 1

1. Introduction 1

2. The study of the history of Chinese syntax 2

2.1. Historical data and the problem of selection 3

2.1.1. Zutangji 5

2.1.2. Zhuzi yulei 6

2.1.3. Piaotongshi yanjie, Liaoqida yanjie 8

2.2. On Chinese word-order change 10

3. On grammaticalization and grammaticalization chains 11

2. Word-Order Change in Prepositional Phrases 15

1. Introduction 15

2. Adpositional phrases, or PPs, in Old Chinese 16

3. The history of YI 18

3.1. YI in Old Chinese 18

3.2. The decline of YI 21

4. The history of the two YUs, and of WEI and BEI 23

4.1. The two YUs in Old Chinese 24

- 4.1.1. Preverbal uses 24
  - 4.1.2. Postverbal uses 24
  - 4.2. The decline of the YUs 26
    - 4.2.1. The history of the passive 26
      - 4.2.1.1. Constructions with passive meaning in Old Chinese 27
      - 4.2.1.2. The emergence of BEI and its grammaticalization as an actor marker 28
      - 4.2.1.3. The replacement of WEI with BEI in Middle Chinese 32
      - 4.2.1.4. The nonpassive BEI and the grammatical status of BEI 34
    - 4.2.2. YU, BI, and the history of the comparative construction 37
    - 4.2.3. The history of the double-object construction 42
    - 4.2.4. The history of the postverbal locative 45
  - 5. Summary 47
- 3. The BA Construction and the Grammaticalization of BA 51
- 1. Introduction 51
  - 2. The BA construction in Modern Mandarin 52
  - 3. The history of the BA construction 59
    - 3.1. The loss of the YI construction 59
      - 3.1.1. The YI construction as a prepositional phrase 59
      - 3.1.2. The semantics of BA and JIANG 60
      - 3.1.3. The rivalry between JIANG and YI 62
    - 3.2. The grammaticalization of BA/JIANG 63
      - 3.2.1. The grammaticalization of BEI as a passive marker 63
      - 3.2.2. The development of BA/JIANG as object markers 65
      - 3.2.3. The emergence of the modern BA construction 67
        - 3.2.3.1. Determination of BA/JIANG's grammatical status in history 68
        - 3.2.3.2. Early purposive constructions 71
        - 3.2.3.3. The grammaticalization of the BA construction 73

- 3.2.4. The co-occurrences of BA with the V-DE-V construction 75
- 3.2.5. The history of the attitudinal BA construction 77
- 4. Features of the grammaticalization of BA 78
  - 4.1. Integrity 78
  - 4.2. Paradigmatic variability 79
  - 4.3. Bondedness 79
  - 4.4. Scope 80
- 5. Summary 81
- 4. The History of LE 82
  - 1. Introduction 82
  - 2. The history of the affixal LE 85
    - 2.1. The origin of LE 85
    - 2.2. The affixation of LE<sub>1</sub> 85
      - 2.2.1. The synonymous verbs in late Middle Chinese 86
      - 2.2.2. The positional shift of LE<sub>1</sub> 87
        - 2.2.2.1. The replacement of synonymous verbs by LE 88
        - 2.2.2.2. The replacement of the aspect marker QUE by LE 89
        - 2.2.2.3. The fronting of LE and the emergence of the resultative VV series 91
  - 3. The history of the clitic LE<sub>2</sub> 92
    - 3.1. The coalescence of YI 矣 and YE 也 93
    - 3.2. The hypothesized LE YE sequence 95
    - 3.3. The use of LAI as a perfect marker 97
    - 3.4. The emergence of LE<sub>2</sub> as a perfect marker 99
      - 3.4.1. The similarities between LAI and YE 99
      - 3.4.2. The relationship between LE and LAI 100
      - 3.4.3. The emergence of the Modern perfect marker 101
  - 4. The grammaticalization of the two LEs 103
    - 4.1. The grammaticalization of the suffixal LE<sub>1</sub> 103
      - 4.1.1. The loss of phonological substance 103
      - 4.1.2. Paradigmatic variability 104
      - 4.1.3. Bondedness and scope 104
      - 4.1.4. The journey from verb to suffix 105

- 4.2. The grammaticalization of the perfect LE<sub>2</sub> 105
  - 4.2.1. Phonological reduction 106
  - 4.2.2. Paradigmatic variability 106
- 5. Summary 107

5. The History of DE 108

- 1. Introduction 108
- 2. DE from Old Chinese to Early Mandarin 112
  - 2.1. DE in Old Chinese 112
  - 2.2. The emergence of the V-DE construction in Middle Chinese 115
  - 2.3. The decline of the V-DE construction and the emergence of the V-DE-V and V-DE S constructions in Early Mandarin 117
    - 2.3.1. The semantics of the V DE construction in the 10th century 117
      - 2.3.1.1. The loss of the passive sense and the meaning of completion 118
      - 2.3.1.2. The semantics of other V DE forms in the 10th century 121
      - 2.3.1.3. The emergence of the V-DE S construction 122
    - 2.3.2. Other uses of DE in the 10th century 122
    - 2.3.3. The emergence of the V-DE-V and the interactions between DE V and V-DE constructions 123
    - 2.3.4. The syntactic distribution of DEs 126
    - 2.3.5. The decline of V-DE forms 128
- 3. The grammatical status of DE in Modern Mandarin 129
  - 3.1. DE as a lexical verb 129
  - 3.2. DE in the DE V sequence 130
  - 3.3. The DEs in the V-DE-V sequence 132
  - 3.4. The DEs in the V-DE sequence 134
  - 3.5. The DEs in the V-DE S sequence 136
  - 3.6. Morphological freedom and boundedness 137
- 4. The grammaticalization of DE 138
  - 4.1. Modalities 139
  - 4.2. The grammaticalization of the modal DE 141

4.2.1 Integrity 142

4.2.1.1. Semantic attrition 1424.2.1.2. The loss of phonological substance 1524.3. Paradigmatic variability 1554.4. Scope 156

4.4.1. The loss of the ability to predicate 157

4.4.2. Simplification of the constituents 158

4.5. Bondedness 159

5. Summary 161

6. Historical Syntax and the History of Chinese 163

1. Introduction 163

2. The attempt to isolate purely syntactic changes 164

3. The theoretical implications of the Chinese cases 168

3.1. Diagrammatic iconicity 1683.2. Isomorphism 1693.3. Iconicity and grammaticalization 1703.4. The history of DE 171

3.4.1. The positional shift 171

3.4.2. The lexicalization of DE 172

3.4.3. The grammaticalization of DE 174

3.4.3.1. The iconicity of the emergence of the V-DE-V form 1743.4.3.2. The iconicity of the emergence of V-DE S form 176

3.4.4. Another iconic effect 176

3.5. The history of LE 177

3.5.1. The iconicity of the development of the perfective LE 177

3.5.2. The iconicity of the development of the perfect LE 178

3.6. The history of BA 180

3.6.1. BA as a case marker 180

3.6.2. BA as a purposive marker 181

4. The two aspects of grammaticalization 184

5. The implications of this study 186

References 191

Index 201