Table of contents

Editors and contributors	VII
Preface	IX
Introduction
Beyond typology: The encoding of motion events across time and varieties Juliana Goschler and Anatol Stefanowitsch	1
Part I. Variation
Typology as a continuum: Intratypological evidence from English and Serbo-Croatian Luna Filipović	17
Same family, different paths: Intratypological differences in three Romance languages Alberto Hijazo-Gascón and Iraide Ibarretxe-Antuñano	39
Disentangling manner and path: Evidence from varieties of German and Romance Raphael Berthele	55
The encoding of motion events: Building typology bottom-up from text data in many languages Bernhard Wälchli and Arnd Sölling	77
Motion events in Turkish-German contact varieties Juliana Goschler	115
Variation in the categorization of motion events by Danish, German, Turkish, and L2 Danish speakers Moiken Jessen and Teresa Cadierno	133

Part II. Change

Describing motion events in Old and Modern French: Discourse effects of a typological change Anetta Kopecka	163
Lexical splits in the encoding of motion events from Archaic to Classical Greek Tatiana Nikitina	185
Caused-motion verbs in the Middle English intransitive motion construction Judith Huber	203
Variation and change in English path verbs and constructions: Usage patterns and conceptual structure Anatol Stefanowitsch	223
Author index	245
Language index	247
Subject index	249