

Contents

---

List of figures	x
List of tables	xi
List of abbreviations	xii
Foreword	xiii
1. Introduction	1
2. Globalisation of competition and business structures	10
1. The internationalisation of business activity and competitive markets	10
2. The corresponding globalisation of anticompetitive practices and structures	14
2.1 Anticompetitive arrangements	14
2.2 Predatory practices and abuse of market power	18
2.3 International merger activity	19
2.4 Co-evolution of anticompetitive practices and competition policy?	25
3. International competition policy between decentralism and centralism	26
1. The limits of national competition policy regimes in globalised markets	26
1.1 Does worldwide competition erode the scope for competition policy?	27
1.2 Can national competition policy cope with worldwide competition?	32
1.2.1 The inbound focus of national competition policies	32
1.2.2 Extraterritorial application of competition rules	33
1.2.3 Discretionary bilateral cooperation as an insufficient supplement	49
1.3 The role of strategic competition policies	53
1.3.1 Instruments of strategic competition policies	54
1.3.2 The economics of the strategic competition policy dilemma	57

1.3.3	The political economy of real-world strategic competition policies	61
1.3.4	Do strategic competition policies violate WTO trade rules?	62
1.3.5	Concluding remarks	64
2.	The limits of a uniform worldwide competition policy regime	64
2.1	Supranational governance and national sovereignty	65
2.2	Public choice problems of a uniform regime	67
2.3	Overall adequacy of centralised global competition governance	70
3.	Does competition of competition policy regimes provide an escape?	72
3.1	Type (I) regulatory antitrust competition via mutual learning	74
3.2	Type (II) regulatory antitrust competition via international trade	78
3.3	Type (III) regulatory antitrust competition via locational competition	79
3.4	Type (IV) regulatory antitrust competition via choice of law	80
4.	Concluding remarks: competence allocation as a problem	82
4.	Towards an international multilevel system of competition policies	84
1.	The concept of multilevel systems of institutions – general idea and working properties	84
1.1	Governance concepts between centralism and decentralism: a brief overview	84
1.2	Multilevel systems and the economics of federalism	88
1.2.1	Introductory remarks on multilevel systems	88
1.2.2	The economics of federalism as a theoretical foundation for a theory of competence allocation in multilevel systems	91
1.3	A theory of competence allocation in multilevel systems of competition institutions	95
1.3.1	Externalities and spillovers	95
1.3.2	Efficiencies in terms of production, transaction and administrative costs	103
1.3.3	Preference orientation	104
1.3.4	Agency problems and lobbying	105
1.3.5	Institutional evolution and adaptability	107
1.4	Criteria for the evaluation of rules for the allocation of competences	113

2.	Existing multilevel competition policy regimes – an analytical overview	115
2.1	The US antitrust system: ongoing discussion about federalism?	116
2.2	The EU competition policy system and its reform dynamics	121
2.3	The WTO competition regime: creating an additional level of antitrust jurisdiction?	134
2.4	The international competition network: a virtual global level?	142
2.5	Avenues towards and state of the world competition order: some brief remarks	148
3.	Concluding remarks	149
5.	A comparative analysis of different rules for the allocation and delimitation of competences	151
1.	Design options for rules for the allocation of competences	151
1.1	Stylised rules extracted from existing regimes	153
1.1.1	The effects doctrine	153
1.1.2	Interstate commerce clause, interstate trade criterion, and community dimension	154
1.1.3	Turnover thresholds	155
1.1.4	Nondiscrimination rule	156
1.1.5	Best practice recommendations and peer pressure	158
1.2	Stylised rules derived from literature	160
1.2.1	Principle of origin and location doctrine	160
1.2.2	The relevant markets rule	162
1.2.3	X-plus rule	163
1.2.4	Voluntary lead jurisdiction (advanced comity principle)	165
1.2.5	Mandatory lead jurisdiction	166
2.	An institutional-economic analysis of competence-allocating rules	168
2.1	The effects doctrine	168
2.1.1	Internalisation of external effects	168
2.1.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	169
2.1.3	Preference conformity	170
2.1.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	171
2.1.5	Adaptability	172

2.2	Turnover thresholds	173
2.2.1	Internalisation of external effects	173
2.2.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	174
2.2.3	Preference conformity	175
2.2.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	176
2.2.5	Adaptability	177
2.3	The nondiscrimination rule	178
2.3.1	Internalisation of external effects	178
2.3.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	179
2.3.3	Preference conformity	180
2.3.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	180
2.3.5	Adaptability	181
2.4	Best practice recommendations and peer pressure	182
2.4.1	Internalisation of external effects	182
2.4.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	183
2.4.3	Preference conformity	184
2.4.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	185
2.4.5	Adaptability	185
2.5	Principle of origin and location doctrine	187
2.5.1	Internalisation of external effects	187
2.5.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	190
2.5.3	Preference conformity	190
2.5.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	191
2.5.5	Adaptability	191
2.6	The relevant markets rule	192
2.6.1	Internalisation of external effects	192
2.6.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	193
2.6.3	Preference conformity	194
2.6.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	195
2.6.5	Adaptability	195
2.7	X-plus rule	196
2.7.1	Internalisation of external effects	196
2.7.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	197
2.7.3	Preference conformity	197
2.7.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	198
2.7.5	Adaptability	199

2.8	Voluntary lead jurisdiction (advanced comity principle)	199
2.8.1	Internalisation of external effects	199
2.8.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	201
2.8.3	Preference conformity	201
2.8.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	202
2.8.5	Adaptability	202
2.9	Mandatory lead jurisdiction model	203
2.9.1	Internalisation of external effects	203
2.9.2	Efficiency: economies of scale and the one-stop-shop principle	204
2.9.3	Preference conformity	204
2.9.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	205
2.9.5	Adaptability	205
3.	A comparative conclusion	207
3.1	Internalisation of external effects	207
3.2	Cost efficiencies	209
3.3	Preference conformity	210
3.4	Minimisation of lobbyism	212
3.5	Adaptability	213
6.	On the appropriate design of an international multilevel competition policy system	218
1.	Elementary features of an international multilevel system of competition policies	218
2.	The fundamental principles of competence allocation	221
3.	The levels and their interrelations	223
3.1	The global level	223
3.2	The supranational–regional level	229
3.3	The national level	231
3.4	The subnational–regional level	232
4.	Concluding remarks	233
	References	238
	Index	281