

Contents

List of figures and tables	xi
Abbreviations	xvii
Preface to the first edition, 2002	xix
Preface to the second edition	xxvii
Acknowledgements to the second edition	xxix
A note on language	xxxi
A note on seid and its analogues	xxxiii
1. Different Vikings? Towards a cognitive archaeology of the later Iron Age	1
A beginning at Birka	1
Textual archaeology and the Iron Age	4
The Vikings in (pre)history	5
The materiality of text	8
Annaliste archaeology and a historical anthropology of the Vikings	10
The Other and the Odd?	12
Conflict in the archaeology of cognition	13
Others without Othering	15
Indigenous archaeologies and the Vikings	17
An archaeology of the Viking mind?	20
2. Problems and paradigms in the study of Old Norse sorcery	22
Entering the mythology	22
Research perspectives on Scandinavian pre-Christian religion	25
Philology and comparative theology	25
Gods and monsters, worship and superstition	26
Religion and belief	26
The invisible population	27
The shape of Old Norse religion	31
The double world: seiðr and the problem of Old Norse ‘magic’	34
The other magics: galdr , gandr and ‘Óðinnic sorcery’	35
Seiðr in the sources	36
Skaldic poetry	37
Eddic poetry	38

The sagas of the kings	38
The sagas of Icelanders (the ‘family sagas’)	39
The fornaldarsögur (‘sagas of ancient times’, ‘legendary sagas’)	42
The biskupasögur (‘Bishops’ sagas’)	42
The early medieval Scandinavian law codes	42
Non-Scandinavian sources	43
Seiðr in research	43
3. Seiðr	55
Óðinn	55
Óðinn the sorcerer	56
Óðinn’s names	62
Freyja and the magic of the Vanir	68
Seiðr and Old Norse cosmology	69
The performers	71
Witches, seeresses and wise women	72
Women and the witch-ride	77
Men and magic	80
The assistants	82
Towards a terminology of Nordic sorcerers	83
The performers in death?	84
The performance	119
Ritual architecture and space	120
The clothing of sorcery	126
Masks, veils and head-coverings	127
Drums, tub-lids and shields	129
Staffs and wands	132
Staffs from archaeological contexts	136
Narcotics and intoxicants	168
Charms	169
Songs and chants	170
The problem of trance and ecstasy	171
Engendering seiðr	172
Ergi , níð and witchcraft	173
Sexual performance and eroticism in seiðr	177
Seiðr and the concept of the soul	183
Helping spirits in seiðr	184
The domestic sphere of seiðr	186
Divination and revealing the hidden	186
Hunting and weather magic	188
The role of the healer	189
Seiðr contextualised	189
4. Noaidevuohta	191
Seiðr and the Sámi	191
Sámi-Norse relations in the Viking Age	193
Sámi religion and the Drum-Time	196

The world of the gods	198
Spirits and Rulers in the Sámi cognitive landscape	200
Names, souls and sacrifice	203
Noaidevuohta and the noaidi	204
Rydving's terminology of noaidevuohta	205
Specialist noaidi	207
Diviners, sorcerers and other magic-workers	208
The sights and sounds of trance	209
'Invisible power' and secret sorcery	210
Women and noaidevuohta	210
Sources for female sorcery	210
Assistants and jojker -choirs	212
Women, ritual and drum magic	213
Female diviners and healers in Sámi society	214
Animals and the natural world	215
The female noaidi ?	216
The rituals of noaidevuohta	217
The role of jojk	218
The material culture of noaidevuohta	218
An early medieval noaidi ? The man from Vivalen	222
Sexuality and eroticism in noaidevuohta	224
Offence and defence in noaidevuohta	225
The functions of noaidevuohta	226
The ethnicity of religious context in Viking-Age Scandinavia	226
5. Circumpolar religion and the question of Old Norse shamanism	230
The circumpolar cultures and the invention of shamanism	230
The shamanic encounter	231
The early ethnographies: shamanic research in Russia and beyond	233
Shamanism in anthropological perspective	236
The shamanic world-view	239
The World Pillar: shamanism and circumpolar cosmology	239
The ensouled world	241
The shamanic vocation	244
Gender and sexual identity	249
Eroticism and sexual performance	251
Aggressive sorcery for offence and defence	253
Shamanism in Scandinavia	258
From the art of the hunters to the age of bronze	258
Seiðr before the Vikings?	260
Landscapes of the mind	262
The eight-legged horse	264
Tricksters and trickery	267
Seiðr and circumpolar shamanism	268
Two analogies on the functions of the seiðr -staff	269
The shamanic motivation	270
Towards a shamanic world-view of the Viking Age	271

6.	The supernatural empowerment of aggression	272
	Seiðr and the world of war	272
	Valkyrjur , skaldmeyjar and hjálmvitr	274
	Female warriors in reality	275
	The valkyrjur in context	276
	The names of the valkyrjur	280
	The valkyrjur in battle-kennings	284
	Supernatural agency in battle	288
	Beings of destruction	288
	Óðinn and the Wild Hunt	291
	The projection of destruction	292
	Battle magic	294
	Sorcery for warriors	294
	Sorcery for sorcerers	297
	Seiðr and battlefield resurrection	300
	Seiðr and the shifting of shape	301
	Berserkir and ulfheðnar	303
	The battlefield of animals	306
	Ritual disguise and shamanic armies	311
	Ecstasy, psychic dislocation and the dynamics of mass violence	313
	Homeric lyssa and holy rage	315
	Predators and prey in the legitimate war	317
	Weaving war, grinding battle: Darraðarljóð and Grottasöngur in context	319
	The ‘weapon dancers’	320
7.	The Viking way	324
	A reality in stories	326
	The invisible battlefield	327
	Material magic	328
	Viking women, Viking men	328
8.	Magic and mind	330
	Receptions and reactions	330
	Cracks in the ice of Norse ‘religion’	331
	Walking into the seiðr : contested interpretations of Viking-Age magic	332
	Questioning Norse ‘shamanism’	334
	Staffs and spinning	336
	Queering magic?	340
	The social world of war	342
	The Viking mind: a conclusion	343
	References	345
	Primary sources, including translations	345
	Pre-nineteenth-century sources for the early Sámi and Siberian cultures	350
	Secondary works	351
	Sources in archive	386
	Index	387