

CONTENTS

Preface		xi
Abbreviations		xiii
Introduction		1
PART ONE. BACKGROUND
Chapter I. The Treatment of Mind in the Empiricist Tradition		15
1. The Atomistic Model	16
2. The Analytical Approach	22
3. The Introspective Criterion	27
4. Positivism in the Mid-Nineteenth Century	32
Chapter II. Politics and Philosophy in Austria in the Late Nineteenth Century		37
1. The Political and Institutional Setting	38
2. The Career of Franz Brentano	42
3. Brentano's Ideas	47
Chapter III. Meinong's Life and Career		58
PART TWO. MEINONG AND THE INTELLECTUAL REVOLUTION
Chapter IV. The Psychologism of the 1880's		77
1. Empiricism and the Philosophy of Science: Ernst Mach	79

2. Meinong's Early Psychologism and His Theory of Mental Operations, 1877-1890 88

Chapter V. The Revolt Against Psychologism, 1890-1905 101

1. The Philosophy of Mathematics and Logic: Frege, Husserl, Boltzmann 101
 2. The Revolt Against Psychologism in the Social Sciences: James, Weber, Dilthey 111
 3. Meinong's Overcoming of Psychologism: The Emergence of the Theory of Objects of a Higher Order, 1890-1899 115
 4. Meinong's Analysis of Time and His Revision of the Introspective Criterion, 1894-1906 124

Chapter VI. The Linguistic Analogy and the Theory of Objects 130

1. Language and Logical Realism 130
 2. The Problem of Ideal versus Natural Languages 141
 3. From Objects of a Higher Order to Gegenstandstheorie, 1899-1904 148
 4. Meinong on Truth, Apprehension, and Knowledge, 1905-1915 158

Chapter VII. Meinong's Theory of Value and the Hermeneutical Tradition 169

1. The German Methodological Controversy and the Concept of Value 170
 2. Meinong and Weber on Causality 178
 3. Meinong's Theory of Values as Objects of Emotional Experiences 181
 4. Meinong on Relative versus Absolute Values 190

PART THREE. OUTCOME: THE EMERGENCE OF TWENTIETH-CENTURY PHILOSOPHY AND EXPERIMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY

Chapter VIII. Meinong and Analytical Philosophy 197

1. Russell's Theory of Descriptions 200

2. Wittgenstein and Logical Atomism 208
3. Logical Positivism 215

Chapter IX. Meinong and Experimental Psychology 220

1. Philosophy and Psychology in Germany and Austria 220
2. Meinong and the Würzburg School 225
3. The Graz School and Gestalt Psychology 232

Chapter X. Meinong and Phenomenology 243

1. Meinong and Husserl: Personal Contacts and Relationships 244
2. Differences in Style and Basic Ideas 246
3. Idealism and the Analytical Approach 251
4. The Rejection of Atomism and the Pure Ego 256
5. Meinong, Phenomenology, and Existentialism 261

Conclusion 265

Bibliography 271

Index 293