
Contents

Introduction	vii
1. Eighty-Three Generalizations About Free Voluntary Reading.....	1
Research on Sustained Silent Reading.....	1
Guidelines for SSR	9
2. Does the Power of Reading Apply to All Languages?	23
First Language Development	24
Heritage Language	25
Foreign Language Studies	27
3. Extensive Reading in English as a Foreign Language by Adolescents and Young Adults: A Meta-Analysis.....	33
Access	35
Duration	35
Results.....	35
Summary and Discussion	39
Conclusion	40
4. Should We Reward Recreational Reading?	45
Evaluating Accelerated Reader.....	46
Is Accelerated Reader Harmful?.....	49
A Jump-Start?.....	50
The Cost	50
Alternatives	50

Contents

5. The “Decline” in Reading in America: Another Case of the “Shock Doctrine”?	53
Are Americans Reading Less?	54
Are We Reading Worse?	56
“No Single Barrier” to Raising Reading Rates?	58
6. Does Intensive Decoding Instruction Contribute to Reading Comprehension?	61
Evidence from the National Reading Panel	62
Evidence from Direct Instruction	62
The Clackmannanshire Study	63
Is Decoding Proficiency Part of Learning to Read?	63
Heavy Skills Instruction Not Necessary	64
7. Free Voluntary Web-Surfing	67
The Computer as Skill-BUILDER	68
The Computer as a Source of Written Comprehensible Input	69
The Computer as a Source of Comprehensible Texts	71
Free Voluntary Surfing	72
Conclusion	77
8. Hypotheses About Free Voluntary Reading	81
The Forgetting Hypothesis	82
The Effortless Reading Hypothesis	82
The Unawareness of Acquisition Hypothesis	83
The Comprehension Checking Hypothesis	83
Conclusions	85
Index	87