

EXTENDED TABLE OF CONTENTS

Abbreviations	x
Epigram	xi
Dedication	xii
Foreword	xiii
Table of cases	xv
Table of statutes	xxi
1. INTRODUCTION
A. The scope of this book	1.17
2. DECONSTRUCTING THE CONTEXTUALISATION, ARCHITECTURE, RATIONALE AND RISKS OF FRANCHISING
A. Introduction	2.1
1. The historical contextualisation of franchising in the EU	2.2
2. The institutional contextualisation of franchising in the EU	2.4
B. The economic contextualisation of franchising in the EU	2.5
1. Estimating the size of franchising in the EU	2.9
C. Deconstructing the economic rationale of franchising – why do people get involved in franchising?	2.21
1. The economic drivers of franchising for franchisors	2.22
2. The economic drivers of franchising for franchisees	2.26
D. Deconstructing the risks inherent in franchising	2.28
1. Inherent risks in franchising to which the franchisor is exposed	2.28
2. Inherent risks in franchising to which the franchisee is exposed	2.32
E. Deconstructing the architecture of franchising	2.34
1. An economic perspective of the architecture of franchising	2.35
2. A legal perspective of the architecture of franchising	2.39
3. Architectural features that distinguish franchising from distribution and commercial agency	2.46
4. The tensile stresses that the architecture of franchise agreements needs to withstand	2.50
5. The impact of sectoral contextualisation upon the architecture of franchising	2.53
6. The impact of economic contextualisation upon the architecture of franchising	2.55
F. Conclusion	2.60
3. DOES THE CONTRACTUAL AND REGULATORY ENVIRONMENT SUPPORT AND PROMOTE FRANCHISING?
A. The difficulties experienced in seeking to regulate franchising in the EU	3.2
B. The need to regulate franchising in the EU – abuse, sharp practice and failure	3.3
C. Analysis of the contractual environment	3.4
1. The differing approaches of EU member states to constructing the contractual environment	3.4
2. Analysis of the contractual environment as regards the economic drivers	3.9
3. Analysis of the contractual environment as regards risk	3.21

D.	Analysis of the self-regulatory environment	3.24
1.	The determinants of the self-regulatory environment	3.25
2.	The self-regulatory environment's relationship with the legal regulatory environment	3.26
3.	The key elements of the self-regulatory environment	3.27
4.	Failings in the self-regulatory environment	3.32
E.	Analysis of the legal regulatory environment	3.38
1.	The pre-contractual relationship – franchise-specific disclosure laws	3.39
2.	The pre-contractual relationship – other laws	3.42
3.	The ongoing franchisor/franchisee relationship	3.51
4.	The termination of the franchisor/franchisee relationship	3.67
F.	Empirical research into the regulatory environment	3.75
G.	Conclusion	3.77
4.	IDENTIFYING A CATALYST TO RE-ENGINEER THE REGULATORY ENVIRONMENT
A.	Breaking down barriers to trade in the EU	4.1
B.	The precedent of commercial agency	4.3
C.	Empirical evidence	4.4
D.	The mechanisms available to harmonise EU member state law	4.5
1.	Directives as the way to harmonise EU member state law	4.6
2.	A European Civil Code as the way to harmonise member state laws	4.7
3.	A directive is the most appropriate approach to regulate franchising in the EU	4.8
E.	Difficulties likely to be encountered	4.9
F.	Lessons to be learned from other franchising regimes	4.10
1.	The USA	4.11
2.	Australia	4.12
3.	How successful are the US and Australian systems?	4.13
G.	Conclusion	4.14
5.	RE-ENGINEERING THE REGULATORY ENVIRONMENT FOR FRANCHISING IN THE EU
A.	Defining franchising	5.2
1.	Shared marketing plan	5.4
2.	Trademarks	5.5
3.	Minimum standard	5.6
B.	Accentuating the influence of commercial imperatives on the EU's legal eco-systems	5.7
1.	Identifying the commercial imperatives	5.8
2.	The current impact of commercial imperatives	5.9
3.	The impact of the commercial imperatives on proposals to re-engineer the EU's regulatory environment?	5.10
C.	Accentuating the impact of the first commercial imperative – maintaining market confidence	5.12
1.	The benefits extended to franchisors	5.13
2.	Focusing regulation where it is needed	5.14
3.	Reducing the disadvantages franchisors suffer compared to corporate chains	5.17
D.	Accentuating the impact of the second commercial imperative – pre-contractual hygiene	5.20
1.	Educating potential franchisees	5.21
2.	Ensuring quality advice for potential franchisees	5.23
3.	Prohibition on misleading or deceptive behaviour	5.39
4.	Registration of franchise documentation	5.40
E.	Accentuating the impact of the third commercial imperative – a mandatory taxonomy	5.41
1.	The US experience	5.42
2.	The Australian experience	5.43
3.	Protecting the franchisor's interests	5.44
4.	Protecting the franchisee's interests	5.45
5.	The prohibition of unconscionable conduct	5.46

F. Conclusion	5.47
6. CONCLUSION
A. The three conclusions of this book	6.1
B. The first conclusion	6.2
C. The second conclusion	6.3
D. The third conclusion	6.4
E. Conclusion	6.5
Appendix 1 Proposed draft franchise directive	297
Appendix 2 Analysis of franchise agreements	312
Appendix 3 Statutes of the 21 countries outside of the EU that have franchise-specific laws	314
Appendix 4 European franchise associations and membership	317
Bibliography	319
Index	331