

Contents

Foreword by Marilyn Strathern	xi
Preface to the first edition	xv
Preface to the second edition	xix
Acknowledgments	liii
Introduction	lv

PART ONE: CONCEPTS

I. THE COMPETING THEORIES	3
Political economy	3
The theory of commodities	3
The theory of gifts	9
Economics	19
The theory of modern goods	19
The theory of traditional goods	22
II. A FRAMEWORK OF ANALYSIS	25
The general relation of production to consumption, distribution, and exchange	26
Marx and Lévi-Strauss on reproduction	26
A simple illustrative example	30
The definition of particular economies	32

III. GIFTS AND COMMODITIES: CIRCULATION	39
The direct exchange of things	40
The social status of transactors	40
The social status of objects	41
The spatial aspect of exchange	44
The temporal dimension of exchange	46
Value and rank	46
The motivation of transactors	50
The circulation of things	55
Velocity of circulation	55
Roads of gift-debt	57
Production and destruction	59
The circulation of people	62
Work-commodities	62
Work-gifts	62
Women-gifts	63
Classificatory kinship terms and prices	68
Circulation and distribution	69
IV. GIFTS AND COMMODITIES: REPRODUCTION	73
Production of commodities by means of commodities	74
The methods of production	74
The methods of consumption	78
Consumption of gifts by means of gifts	80
The methods of consumption	80
The methods of production	96
Summary	105
V. TRADITIONAL AND MODERN GOODS: A CRITIQUE	107
The conceptual problem	108
The perceptual problem	113
The methodological problem	116

PART TWO: THEORY

VI. THE TRANSFORMATION OF GIFTS INTO COMMODITIES IN COLONIAL PAPUA NEW GUINEA	121
Theories of change in PNG	121
The emergence of commodity production in PNG	127
The emergence of labor-power as a commodity	127
The emergence of primary commodity production	165
The emergence of land as a commodity	172
VII. THE TRANSFORMATION OF COMMODITIES INTO GIFTS IN COLONIAL PAPUA NEW GUINEA	177
Restricted reproduction in the Sepik District	178
Delayed reproduction in the Highlands	192
The kula gift exchange system of Milne Bay District	209
Gift exchange and capital accumulation in Central District	217
Conclusion	225
Mathematical appendix: A matrix approach to the calculus of kinship relations	229
References	239
Index	259