

Contents

| | |
|---|-------|
| List of Plates | xvii |
| List of Maps | xx |
| List of Tables | xxii |
| List of Figures | xxiv |
| Preface to the New Edition | xxv |
| Acknowledgements | xxvi |
| Translator's Preface | xxvii |
| Introduction | 1 |
| Lands and peoples | 3 |
| The Han Chinese | 6 |
| Non-Han minorities | 12 |
| Modes of life and cultures | 13 |
| The sedentary peoples with a highly developed agriculture, | |
| 14 • The nomadic livestock-raisers of the steppe zone, | |
| 15 • The mountain peoples of the Himalayan complex and | |
| its borderlands, 16 • The mixed cultures of South China and | |
| South-East Asia, 17 • The sedentary cultures and the traders | |
| of the Central Asian oases, 18 • The main routes of the | |
| Eurasian continent, 19 | |
| Outline of the historical evolution of the Chinese world | 20 |
| Antiquity, 22 • The first unified state, its decline, and the | |
| Middle Ages, 23 • The Mandarinal state and its restoration | |
| after the Mongol occupation, 24 • The Manchu empire, | |
| 25 • Contemporary China, 25 | |
| The general characteristics of Chinese civilization | 27 |
| Writing, 32 | |

| | |
|---|----|
| PART 1. FROM THE ARCHAIC MONARCHY TO THE CENTRALIZED STATE | 35 |
| 1 The Archaic Monarchy | 37 |
| The Neolithic antecedents | 37 |
| A Hsia dynasty, 39 | |
| The archaic monarchy | 40 |
| The first dynasty of the Bronze Age: the Shang or Yin, 41 • Divination and sacrifices, 45 | |
| 2 The Age of the Principalities | 51 |
| The decline of the archaic monarchy | 51 |
| The first few centuries of the Chou, 51 • Traditional chronology, 52 | |
| From the principalities to the kingdoms | 53 |
| The nobiliary society of the ninth to seventh centuries B.C., 53 • The decline of nobiliary institutions, 58 | |
| 3 The Formation of the Centralized State | 62 |
| The acceleration in the changes | 63 |
| The changes in political power, 63 • Changes in the nature of war, 65 • Upsurge of the economy and technical innovations, 67 • Social upheavals, 73 | |
| The state revolution | 78 |
| The foundation of the centralized state, 79 • Distinctive characteristics of the new state, 80 | |
| 4 The Heritage of Antiquity | 83 |
| Traditions of the tenth to sixth centuries B.C. | 83 |
| The Classics, 83 • Relatively late character of the classical traditions, 86 | |
| The awakening of moral and political reflection | 87 |
| Confucius, patron of the school of 'literati', 87 • Mo-tzu, founder of a sect of preaching brothers, 88 | |
| Intellectual currents of the fourth and third centuries B.C. | 89 |
| The theorists of the state, 90 • From religious practice to philosophy: the Taoists, 93 • Mencius, 95 • Hsün-tzu, 96 • Sophists and specialists in the 'Five Elements', 97 • Literature, 98 | |

| | |
|--|-----|
| PART 2. RISE, EVOLUTION, AND DECLINE OF THE FIRST CENTRALIZED STATE | 101 |
| Prologue | 102 |
| 5 The Conquering Empire | 103 |
| From the Ch'in to the Han | 103 |
| The unification of the Chinese lands and the first expansionist tendencies, 103 • Collapse of the Ch'in empire and advent of the Han, 108 • Permanence of Legalist institutions, 110 • The reduction of the 'fiefs' and the reining-in of the imperial nobility, 115 | |
| The great expansion of the Han in Asia | 117 |
| Mongolia and central Asia, 119 • Manchuria and Korea, 121 • The organization of the armies of the north, 122 • The Han advance into tropical lands, 124 • The first breakthrough to South-East Asia and the Indian Ocean, 126 | |
| 6 Causes and Consequences of the Expansion | 129 |
| Economics and politics | 130 |
| Commerce and expansion, 130 • Policy of gifts and the trade in silk, 131 • The sinicization of the barbarians and their integration in the empire, 133 | |
| Economy and society | 138 |
| Progress of technology and upsurge of the economy, 138 • Rich merchants and gentry, 143 • Freedom or a controlled economy? 144 | |
| 7 The Rise of the Gentry and the Crisis in Political Institutions | 149 |
| From palace intrigues to usurpation, 149 • The new bases of the restored empire, 151 • Progress of commercial relations in the first and second centuries A.D., 153 • The development of the new empire from its foundation to the insurrection of 184 A.D., 154 • The Messianic revolutionaries, 155 • The empire a prey to the soldiery, 156 | |
| 8 The Civilization of the Han Age | 158 |
| The scholastic philosophy of the Five Elements, 158 • Diversity of the traditions, 159 • The rise of esoteric interpretations, 161 • Links between the scholastic philosophy and the realities of the time, 162 • Rivalries between different | | schools; opposing tendencies, 163 • The zenith of classical studies and the intellectual renaissance of the end of the Han period, 166 • The advent of history as a synthesis and as moral and political reflection, 166 • A court literature, 168

PART 3. THE MIDDLE AGES 171

Prologue 172

9 Barbarians and Aristocrats 174

Generalities 174

From the military dictatorship to anarchy (A.D. 190–317) 176

The Three Kingdoms: the Ts'ao-Wei in North China, 176 • Shu-Han and Wu (Szechwan and the valley of the Yangtze), 179 • The civil war and the revolt of the sinicized mercenaries, 179

The reign of the aristocracies in the Yangtze basin 181

The Eastern Chin, 182 • The Sung, 183 • The Ch'i 183 • The Liang, 184 • The Ch'en, 185

Kingdoms and empires of the sinicized 'barbarians' in North China 186

The Sixteen Kingdoms of the Five Barbarians (fourth century), 186 • The rise of the Tabgatch (Toba) and formation of the empire of the Northern Wei, 190 • Tensions in North China: its breakup and division (534–577), 193

Contacts, influences, and foreign relations 195

South China, South-East Asia, and the Indian Ocean, 196 • Manchuria, Korea, and Japan, 197 • Mongolia and central Asia, 199

10 The Medieval Civilization 202

Metaphysics, aesthetics, and poetry 203

From Legalist nominalism to ontological speculations, 203 • Individualism, freedom, aesthetics, and poetry, 206 • Taoist circles, 209

The great enthusiasm for Buddhism 210

The penetration of Buddhism into China, 211 • Acclimatization, 214 • The great upsurge of Buddhism in China, 217 • Religion, society, and religious policy, 220 • The pilgrimages, 222 • Buddhist translations and literature in Chinese, 225 • Buddhism's contributions to the Chinese world, 226

PART 4. FROM THE MIDDLE AGES TO MODERN TIMES 233

11 The Aristocratic Empire 235

The political history of the period 581–683 237

Political and economic foundations of the T'ang empire 238

Big public works, 239 • The administrative system, 242 • Juridical institutions, 244 • Agrarian regulations, 245 • Armies, 247

The great expansion of the seventh century 252

The events, 252

The period 684–755: political history 256

The empresses Wu and Wei, 256 • The golden age of the T'ang, 258 • The military rebellion of 755–763, 259

12 The Transition to the Mandarin Empire 261

The consequences of the rebellion 261

The tide of expansion ebbs, 261 • The changes in the fiscal system and the evolution of society, 262 • The first great expansion of rice growing, 265

The crumbling of the empire 266

Political developments, 266 • A new form of power, 268 • Regional autonomy and economic expansion in the tenth century, 271

Conclusion 272

The dawn of a new world, 272

13 From the Opening-up to the World to the Return to the Sources of the Classical Tradition 274

The zenith of medieval culture 275

History and poetry, 275 • The zenith of Chinese Buddhism, 277

Foreign influences 281

Iranian influences, 282 • China and Islam from the seventh to the ninth centuries, 287

The radiation of T'ang civilization 289

Chinese influences in Japan, 290

The 'nationalist' reaction and the return to the sources of the Chinese tradition 291

The 'ancient style' movement, 293 • The repression and decline of Buddhism, 294

| | |
|--|-----|
| PART 5. THE CHINESE 'RENAISSANCE' | 297 |
| Prologue | 298 |
| 14 The New World | 300 |
| History and political institutions | 300 |
| The events, 300 • The new state, 303 • The reform movement, 305 | |
| The armies | 308 |
| From conscription to mercenaries, 308 • Firearms, 311 | |
| The new society | 312 |
| A class living on unearned income, 312 • Agrarian problems, 314 • The urban expansion, 316 • A more mobile society, 318 | |
| The economic expansion | 319 |
| The growth in food production, 319 • Expansion of handicrafts and trade, 320 • The mercantile state, 322 • Extension of the monetary economy, 324 • The maritime expansion, 326 | |
| 15 The Civilization of the Chinese 'Renaissance' | 330 |
| The background to the renewal | 331 |
| Learned culture and popular culture, 331 • Wood-block printing and typography, 332 | |
| Science and philosophy | 337 |
| Literary output in the Sung age and the development of the sciences, 337 • The beginnings of scientific archaeology, 341 • New tendencies in history, 342 • Cosmology and ethics: the construction of a naturalist philosophy, 344 | |
| Conclusion | 347 |
| PART 6. FROM THE SINICIZED EMPIRES TO THE MONGOL OCCUPATION | 349 |
| Prologue: Nomads and mountain dwellers in the tenth to fourteenth centuries | 350 |
| 16 The Sinicized Empires | 352 |
| The Khitan empire of the Liao, 352 • The Western Hsia, an empire of cattle-breeders and caravaneers, 354 • The Jürchen empire of the Chin, 356 | |

| | |
|--|-----|
| 17 The Mongol Invasion and Occupation | 360 |
| The Mongol regime | 364 |
| The installation of the Mongol system of exploitation, 364 • Racial discrimination, 368 • Taxation and exploitation of the wealth of China, 370 • Revolts and resistance to the occupiers, 372 | |
| Relations between East Asia, Christendom, and the Islamic countries | 373 |
| Envoys and merchants from Christendom, 374 • The Chinese diaspora over the Eurasian continent, 376 • Literature, science, and religion under the Mongol occupation, 379 | |
| PART 7. THE REIGN OF THE AUTOCRATS AND EUNUCHS | 385 |
| Prologue | 386 |
| 18 Reconstruction and Expansion | 387 |
| Dissolution of the Mongol empire and foundation of the Ming dynasty | 387 |
| The liberation of Chinese territory, 387 • Reconstruction of the agrarian economy, 390 • Control of the population, 392 • Absolutist tendencies, 393 | |
| The pursuit of expansion | 397 |
| Mongolia, Manchuria, and Vietnam, 397 • The big maritime expeditions, 398 • The start of the withdrawal, 402 | |
| 19 Political, Social, and Economic Changes | 406 |
| Political evolution | 406 |
| Eunuchs and secret police, 406 • The transfer of the capital, 408 | |
| Social and economic evolution | 409 |
| The question of the army families, 410 • The progressive disappearance of the families of craftsmen, 412 • Social disturbances, 413 • Changes in the economy, 414 | |
| External dangers | 416 |
| The Mongol offensives, 416 • Piracy, 417 | |
| 20 The Beginnings of Modern China and the Crisis at the End of the Ming Dynasty | 423 |
| The urban revival | 425 |

| | |
|--|-----|
| The upsurge of big business and craft industry, 425 | |
| • Technical progress, 426 • A new urban, mercantile society, 429 | |
| The crisis period of the last fifty years | 430 |
| Financial crisis, 430 • Political crisis, 432 • Popular insurrections, 434 • The Manchu threat, 435 | |
| 21 Intellectual Life in the Ming Age | 437 |
| Prologue | 437 |
| Philosophy, science, and literature | 438 |
| The evolution of currents of thought, 438 • The progress of practical knowledge, 441 • An urban literature, 446 | |
| The first influences from modern Europe | 448 |
| The arrival of the first Catholic missionaries in East Asia, 449 • The difficulties of dialogue, 454 • The most eminent converts, 456 • Reciprocal influences, 458 | |
| General conclusion to the history of the late Ming | 460 |
| PART 8. AUTHORITARIAN PATERNALISM | 463 |
| Prologue | 464 |
| 22 The Conquest and the Foundation of the Manchu Regime | 465 |
| The rise of the Manchus | 465 |
| The period of formation, 465 • The installation of the invaders in China, 466 | |
| Delays and difficulties | 469 |
| The resistance of the Southern Ming, 469 • Major new outbreak of piracy, 470 • The rebellion of the 'Three Feudatories', 1674-1681, 471 | |
| 23 The Enlightened Despots | 474 |
| The reign of the moral order | 474 |
| The winning-over of the educated classes, 474 • A 'Confucian' empire, 476 | |
| The most extensive empire in the world | 477 |
| Mongolia, Central Asia, and Tibet: war, religion, and diplomacy, 479 • The creation of the 'New Territories', 481 • A continental, cosmopolitan empire, 482 | |

| | |
|--|-----|
| An era of prosperity | 483 |
| High watermark of agricultural techniques, 483 • Craftsmanship on an 'industrial' scale and unprecedented commercial expansion, 484 • Population explosion and colonization, 488 | |
| Frontier conflicts | 489 |
| First clashes with Russian colonization in East Asia, 490 • Revolts of colonized peoples, 491 • Vietnamese piracy, 492 | |
| Deterioration of the political and social climate | 493 |
| The advance of corruption and the first peasant revolts, 493 • The vices of the political system, 494 | |
| 24 Intellectual Life from the Middle of the Seventeenth Century to the End of the Eighteenth Century | 497 |
| The philosophers of the seventeenth century | 497 |
| Continuity of intellectual trends in the seventeenth century, 498 • Criticism of absolutism and the first researches into the intellectual history of China, 499 • An evolutionary brand of sociology, 500 • Ku Yen-wu, the father of scientific criticism in history and philology, 502 • The return to the concrete; the new style of education, 504 | |
| Politics, society, and intellectual life under the enlightened despots | 505 |
| The moral order, 507 • The patronage of the emperors and the rich merchants, 510 | |
| The upsurge of textual criticism and the philosophers of the eighteenth century | 513 |
| Formation of the school of critical studies, 513 • Tai Chen: scientist, scholar, and philosopher, 515 • A philosophy of history, 517 | |
| The work of the Jesuits and the influence of China on Europe | 518 |
| The scientific work and the influence of the Jesuits in China, 518 • Borrowings from China and European reactions, 523 | |
| PART 9. FROM DECLINE TO TAKEOVER | 529 |
| Prologue | 530 |
| 25 The Great Recession | 532 |
| The internal causes of the decline | 532 |

| | |
|--|---------|
| Smuggling and piracy | 534 |
| The deficit on the balance of trade, 536 • The first opium 'war', 538 • Monetary problems, 541 | |
| China and the West | 542 |
| 26 The Social Expansion and Its Consequences | 546 |
| The Kingdom of Heaven | 547 |
| A revolutionary tradition, 547 • Rise and fall of the T'ai P'ing rebellion, 550 | |
| Other insurrections | 556 |
| The Nien, 557 • The colonized peoples, 558 | |
| The consequences | 560 |
| Priority of agrarian reconstruction, 560 • Aggravation of the burdens imposed on commerce, 561 • Political changes, 563 • The birth of the contradictions, 564 | |
| 27 The Failure of Modernization and the Advance of Foreign Intrusion | 566 |
| The problems of modernization | 567 |
| The first attempts at industrialization, 567 • The causes of the failure, 569 • Free enterprise or state economy? 575 | |
| The advance of foreign intrusion and its consequences | 576 |
| The advance of the process of subjection, 577 | |
| The encirclement | 581 |
| Economic effects, 582 • Psychology and politics, 584 | |
| Conclusion | 587 |
| 28 Intellectual Currents in the Nineteenth Century | 590 |
| Reformed Confucianism, 591 • Orthodox reaction and reformist revival, 594 • The return to forgotten traditions, 596 | |
| The scientific influences of the West | 598 |
| PART 10. CHINA CRUCIFIED | 601 |
| Prologue: The beginning of the terrible years | 602 |
| Demonstrations of disarray | 604 |
| 29 The Disintegration of the Traditional Economy and Society | 608 |
| The ruin of the Chinese economy | 610 |

| | |
|--|---------|
| The pressure of reparations, 610 • The economic takeover, 612 • Natural calamities, 615 | |
| Movements of population and social changes | 617 |
| Exodus and emigration, 618 • The breakup of the traditional society, 622 | |
| 30 Political Developments in the First Half of the Twentieth Century | 626 |
| The epoch of Yüan Shih-k'ai | 626 |
| The disappearance of the old regime, 626 • The dictatorship of Yüan Shih-k'ai, 628 | |
| The period of the war-lords | 630 |
| Internal policy and foreign presence, 630 • From the efforts of Sun Yat-sen to the triumph of Chiang Kai-shek, 632 | |
| The Nanking decennium | 633 |
| Foundations and characteristics of the Nationalist regime, 634 • The Japanese invasion of Manchuria and the development of the Red Army, 636 | |
| From the Japanese invasion to the advent of the People's Republic | 641 |
| The Chungking period, 641 • The civil war of 1946-1949, 644 | |
| 31 Philosophical and Literary Developments | 646 |
| The influence of Japan and the discovery of evolutionary philosophy, 647 • The Western invasion, 650 • The development of Marxism, 653 • Historical sciences and exact sciences, 655 | |
| PART 11. A NEW CHAPTER IN CHINESE HISTORY: THE PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA | 659 |
| Prologue | 660 |
| The novel features of the new regime | 660 |
| From the alliance to the rupture with the Soviet Union | 664 |
| The Soviet model, 665 • The Great Leap Forward, 667 | |
| From the rupture with the U.S.S.R. to the death of Mao Tse-tung | 669 |
| Interlude, 1960-1965, 671 • The Cultural Revolution and its sequel, 673 | |

| | |
|---|-----|
| From the death of Mao Tse-tung to the beginning of the 1990s | 678 |
| Final note | 680 |
| General Chronology | 684 |
| Chronological Table | 687 |
| Bibliography | 745 |
| General works | 746 |
| Bibliographies by Periods | 750 |
| Antiquity to the fifth century B.C., 750 • Warring States, 751 • | |
| Empires of the Ch'in and the Han, 752 • Medieval period | |
| (from the Han to the Sui) 754 • Sui, T'ang, and the Five | |
| Dynasties, 756 • The Sung dynasty, 758 • Liao, Chin, Hsia, | |
| and Mongol empires, 761 • The Ming dynasty, 763 • From | |
| 1644 to 1798, 767 • Nineteenth century, 769 • First half of | |
| the twentieth century, 772 • Since 1949, 776 | |
| Index | 781 |