
Contents

- Preface, ix
- 1 The Subject Is Organizations; The Verb is Organizing, 1
- The Importance of Organizations, 2
 - Organizations as an Area of Study, 8
 - Common and Divergent Interests, 11
 - The Elements of Organizations, 19
 - Defining the Concept of Organization, 27
 - Summary, 33
- 2 Organizations as Rational Systems, 35
- The Defining Characteristics, 36
 - Selected Schools, 40
 - Summary and Tentative Conclusions, 56
- 3 Organizations as Natural Systems, 59
- Basic versus Distinctive Characteristics, 59
 - Selected Schools, 64
 - Summary and Tentative Conclusions, 83
- 4 Organizations as Open Systems, 87
- System Levels, 88
 - Special Emphases and Insights, 90

Selected Schools, 98

Summary and Tentative Conclusions, 106

5 Combining Perspectives, Expanding Levels, 107

Attempts at Integration, 108

Glancing Back and Looking Forward, 113

Expanded Levels of Analysis, 115

Theories at the Ecological Level, 120

Concluding Comment, 122

6 Technology and Structure, 124

Organizations as Technical Adaptive Systems, 125

Technology and Structure: Natural System Formulations, 137

Summary, 149

7 Labor and Structure, 151

The Social Boundaries of Organizations, 151

Division of Labor, 158

Labor Markets and Organizational Boundaries, 164

High-Performance Work Organizations, 170

Problems for Participants, 173

Concluding Comments, 181

8 Goals, Power, and Control, 183

Goal Setting in Organizations, 183

Anarchies, Adhocracies, and Learning, 196

Control Systems, 202

Critical and Postmodern Conceptions of Power, 215

Summary, 218

9 The Dyadic Environment of the Organization, 220

Why Are There Organizations, and Where Do They Place
Their Boundaries? 221

Transaction Costs and the Origins of Firms, 221

How Do Organizations Manage Their Relations with Other Organizations? 233

Resource Dependence and the Negotiated
Environment, 233

Summary, 243

10 Organization of the Environment, 245

How Do New Organizations and New Populations
of Organizations Arise, and Why Do They Fail?:
Ecological Perspectives, 246

How Are Organizations Shaped by Broader
Social-Political-Cultural Processes?: Institutional
Perspectives, 258

Summary, 277

11 Networks In and Around Organizations, 278

Introduction: From Metaphor to Method to Worldview, 278

Network Thinking, 279

Interorganizational Networks, 285

Network Forms of Organization, 291

Sectoral and Societal Networks, 301

Summary, 307

12 Strategy, Structure, and Performance: The Sociology of Organizational Strategy, 310

Why Are Organizations in Some Industries More Profitable
Than Those in Others? 313

Organizational Performance, 326

Summary, 338

13 The Rise and Transformation of the Corporate Form, 340

Changing Forms of Organizations, 343

Are Organizations Still the Defining Structures of Society? 361

Summary, 367

14 Changing Contours of Organizations and Organization Theory, 368

From Unitary to Multiparadigm, 369

From Monocultural to Multicultural Studies, 374

From Present-centered to Longitudinal and Historical Analysis, 376
 From Micro- to Macro Units and Levels of Analysis, 381
 From Structure to Process, 384

References, 391

Name Index, 439

Subject Index, 447