

CONTENTS

---

About the authors	xv
Professions under the resilient practitioner umbrella	xvi
Preface	xvii
Skovholt practitioner professional resiliency and self-care inventory, 2014 version	xix
Thomas M. Skovholt
PART I	1
1 Caring for others versus self-care: The great human drama	3
Self-reflection exercises	8
2 Joys, rewards, and gifts of practice	9
Joys of practice	10
Rewards of practice	12
Gifts of practice	14
Self-reflection exercises	15
3 The Cycle of Caring: Core of the helping professions	18
Caring: A precondition for an effective helping relationship	19
The Cycle of Caring	22
The cycle in summary	35
Self-reflection exercises	36
4 The elevated stressors of the novice practitioner	38
The core novice stressor – so much ambiguity	39
Trekking with a crude map	41

Acute need for positive mentoring vs. orphan stress – critical mentor – novice neglect	47
Glamorized expectations	51
Intense evaluation and illuminated scrutiny by professional gatekeepers	55
Porous emotional boundaries	56
Ethical and legal confusion	58
Acute performance anxiety and fear	60
The fragile and incomplete practitioner self	60
Summary	62
Self-reflection exercises	62
5 Hazards of practice	64
Difficult elements of our gratifying work in the helping professions	65
Hazards summary	96
Self-reflection exercises	96
6 Hemorrhaging of the Caring Self: Burnout, compassion fatigue, vicarious trauma, ambiguous endings, and professional uncertainty	101
Burnout	102
Lack of clarity: What really is burnout?	103
Work of Maslach	104
Seven sources of burnout	105
Meaning and caring burnout	107
Compassion fatigue	110
Vicarious trauma	111
Ambiguous endings	112
Professional uncertainty	116
Summary	119
Self-reflection exercises	120
PART II	121
7 What is human resilience?	123
The dramatic increase in psychology in the use of the terms resilience and resiliency	123
Werner and Garmazey, grandparents of resilience research . . . and a nod to Maas	124
Resilience: The ability to bounce back	125
Balancing caring for others and caring for self	126
Losing one's innocence about the assertive need for self-care	127
The need for more self-care at times of personal crisis or excessive stress	129

Codependency and self-care	132
Psychological wellness as an ethical imperative	133
Self-reflection exercises	133
8 Sustaining the professional self	135
Sustained by meaningful work	136
Maximizing the experience of professional success	138
Avoid the grandiosity impulse and relish small "I made a difference" victories	142
Think long term	142
Creating and sustaining an active, individually designed development method	143
Professional self-understanding	145
Creating a professional greenhouse at work	148
Using professional venting and expressive writing to release distress emotions	151
The "Good Enough Practitioner"	152
Understanding the reality of pervasive early professional anxiety	153
Increasing intellectual excitement and decreasing boredom by reinventing oneself	155
Minimizing the ambiguity of the work and ambiguous endings	156
Learning to set boundaries, create limits, and say no to unreasonable helping requests	158
Summary	158
Self-reflection exercises	159
9 Sustaining the personal self	161
Constant investment in a personal renewal process	161
Awareness of the danger of one-way caring relationships in one's personal life	162
Nurturing one's self	162
Summary: Keeping in focus one's own need for balanced wellness – physical, spiritual, emotional, and social	182
Self-reflection exercises	183
10 The Eye of the Storm model of practitioner resiliency	184
Eye of the Storm model	185
One leg of the stool: The resilient practitioner has a high vitality index	186
The second leg: The Cycle of Caring process as the core of the practitioner's work	187
The third leg of the resilient practitioner stool: The intense will to learn and grow	189
Summary of the Eye of the Storm model of practitioner resiliency	191

11	The evolving practitioner from early career anxiety to later – usually – competence	192
	Thomas M. Skovholt and Michael H. Rønnestad
	Themes in professional development	195
	Phases of practitioner development	209
12	Burnout prevention and self-care strategies of expert practitioners	231
	Mary Mullenbach and Thomas M. Skovholt
	Category A: Professional stressors	233
	Category B: Emergence of the expert practitioner	236
	Category C: Creating a positive work structure	240
	Category D: Protective factors	245
	Category E: Nurturing self through solitude and relationships	248
	Conclusion	252
	Self-reflection exercises	253
13	Epilogue	255
	Imagery exercise	255
	Self-reflection exercises	256
14	Self-care action plan	258
	Part 1: Assess your own other-care vs. self-care balance	258
	Part 2: Action plan for change	269
	Acknowledgments	271
	References	273
	Index	295