

Detailed table of contents

Table of abbreviations	xxiii
Table of cases	xxvii
Table of treaties and legislation	lxxii
 The Court and its jurisdiction	 1
1. Europe's Judges	3
The origins of the Court	5
The members of the Court and its working methods	7
Judges	7
The number of Judges	7
The formations of judgment	8
The judgment	9
Advocates General	14
Method of appointment	19
The advent of the Court of First Instance	25
The accountability of the Court	27
The jurisdiction of the Court	32
 2. Infringement proceedings	 34
The Court and the complainant	35
The Court and the Commission	40
The Court and the defendant State	44
How effective are infringement proceedings?	47
The effect of the Constitutional Treaty	51
 3. The action for annulment	 53
Acts susceptible to review	56
The position of the European Parliament	63
Légitimation passive	63
Légitimation active	64
The position of the European Parliament: an assessment	67
The standing of private parties	69
The distinction between regulations and decisions	70
Direct concern	74
Individual concern	76
General	76
Special cases	78
Interest in bringing proceedings	80

The availability of a remedy in the national courts	82
The effect of the Constitutional Treaty	88
Standing: an assessment	91
4. The preliminary rulings procedure	95
The importance of the preliminary rulings procedure	97
The subject of the reference	104
General	104
The preserve of the national courts	105
Questions of fact	105
Questions of national law	107
The discretion conferred on inferior national courts	114
Courts of last resort	119
Preliminary rulings on validity	125
Preliminary rulings and the area of freedom, security and justice	131
5. The judicial architecture of the Union	138
The advent of the Treaty of Nice	140
References for preliminary rulings	142
Direct actions	146
Judicial panels	148
General	148
The Civil Service Tribunal	149
The proposed Community Patent Court	151
Appeals from the CFI to the Court	152
The future	153
 The Court and the legal order	 157
6. Treaty provisions and national law	159
Van Gend en Loos and the birth of direct effect	161
The Opinion of Advocate General Roemer	164
The judgment of the Court	165
An assessment of the Court's decision	168
The direct effect of positive provisions of the Treaty	170
The horizontal direct effect of Treaty provisions	172
Treaty provisions not producing direct effect	175
Primacy	179
7. Direct effect and Community acts	184
Direct applicability and direct effect	185
The status of decisions and directives	187
The Court's early case law	189
Grad v Finanzamt Traunstein	189

SACE v Italian Ministry for Finance	190
van Duyn v Home Office	192
Nederlandse Ondernemingen v Inspecteur der Invoerrechten en Accijnzen	193
Pubblico Ministero v Ratti	194
Becker v Finanzamt Münster-Innenstadt	196
Can directives have horizontal effect?	198
Grasping the nettle	199
The reasoning of the Court in Marshall	200
Mitigating factors	203
The notion of State	204
The duty of consistent interpretation	209
The Marleasing case and its progeny	211
Vertical cases and the duty of consistent interpretation	217
The material scope of the duty of consistent interpretation	221
Pressure for change	225
Directives and the limits of direct effect	228
The effect on individuals of Directive 83/189 on national technical standards	228
Non-contractual cases	229
Criminal cases	230
Contractual cases	231
Other directives	236
Preventing abuse	238
Revisiting horizontal direct effect?	239
An alternative to the theory of substitution and exclusion	250
8. Direct effect, primacy and the national courts	253
The Kompetenz-Kompetenz debate	255
Reviewing the validity of Community acts	257
The repercussions of the Maastricht decision	259
The effect of the Constitutional Treaty	261
Scope	261
Kompetenz-Kompetenz and the response of national courts	263
9. European rights, national remedies	267
The initial phase: judicial restraint	268
The principle of national procedural autonomy	268
The application of the principle of national procedural autonomy	270
Recovering charges which have been 'passed on'	270
Interest	271
Standing	272
A right to damages?	274
The need for legislation	276

The second phase: judicial interventionism	278
An end to restraint?	278
The right to effective protection under Directive 76/207	279
A general right to effective protection	283
The duties of Member States	285
Limitation periods	287
Interim protection	289
The principle of State liability	295
The third phase: striking a balance?	300
The demise of Emmott	301
Can a national court be prevented from raising points of Community law of its own motion?	304
The principle of State liability	308
The conditions under which liability arises	308
Liability for judicial conduct	311
Is State liability a remedy of last resort?	319
The liability of private parties	326
An assessment of the Court's approach	329
State liability	329
Effectiveness	330
Equivalence	332
Concluding remarks	333
 10. General principles of law and fundamental rights	 335
The general principle of respect for fundamental rights	337
Cases involving the Community institutions	340
Competition law	340
Staff cases	345
Legislative acts	346
Cases involving the Member States	353
Obligations imposed by Community law	353
Powers conferred by Community law	355
Derogations permitted by Community law	355
What is the right standard of protection?	364
Political responses to the case law	367
Opinion 2/94 of the Court	369
The Treaties of Amsterdam and Nice	371
The Charter of Fundamental Rights of the European Union	375
The Convention on the Future of Europe and the Constitutional Treaty	380
The incorporation of the Charter	382
Union accession to the European Convention on Human Rights	384
An assessment	386

The Court and the substantive law	391
11. The free movement of goods	393
The scope of Article 28	395
The Dassonville formula	398
The effect of Dassonville	399
Non-discriminatory barriers to trade and the rule of reason	403
The relationship between the rule of reason and Article 30	406
What is a discriminatory rule?	410
Testing the limits of Article 28	415
The demise of the Dassonville formula?	422
The Sunday trading cases	423
The ruling in Keck and Mithouard	427
What are selling arrangements?	431
Second thoughts?	433
Concluding remarks	438
12. The free movement of workers	442
Discrimination	445
From discrimination to obstacles to freedom of movement	451
The outer limits of Article 39	456
A de minimis rule?	456
Abuse of rights	458
13. The right of establishment and freedom to provide services	462
The distinction between establishment and services	465
Direct effect	468
The mutual recognition of qualifications	470
The beneficiaries of the Treaty	475
General	475
Education	478
Health care	479
From discrimination to a rule of reason	486
Services	487
Establishment	492
The rule of reason and mutual recognition	494
The convergence of the freedoms	498
14. Towards citizenship	501
The Treaty prohibition of discrimination on grounds of nationality	501
Legislative initiatives	506
Citizenship of the Union	508
Background	508

The Martínez Sala case	511
An independent right of residence?	512
The rights of lawfully resident Union citizens	516
Rights of a non-financial nature	516
Financial rights	519
An assessment	527
15. Equal treatment for men and women	533
The evolution of the legal framework	534
The provisions of the EEC Treaty on social policy and the decision in Defrenne II	534
The importance of Defrenne II	537
Equal pay for work of equal value	540
The equal treatment directives	542
Changes to the Treaty	543
The role of the Court	546
The material scope of the Community rules	547
What is pay?	547
General	547
Pensions and the Barber case	548
The temporal effect of the Barber case	549
Levelling down	553
The relevance of actuarial considerations	554
An assessment	556
The material scope of Directive 76/207	558
The principle of equal treatment	558
Qualifications to the principle of equal treatment	559
Gender reassignment and sexual orientation	564
Indirect discrimination	570
The Court's general approach	571
The application of the general rule	573
The burden of proof	577
An assessment	580
Pregnancy	581
Positive action	590
Background	590
The case law	591
An assessment	600
Concluding remarks	600
 The Court and its general approach	 605
16. Interpretation and the limits of literalism	607
The multi-lingual nature of Community law	608
The drafting of Community provisions	611

The Treaty	611
Community acts	615
An assessment of the Court's approach	620
17. The normative status of the case law	622
The origins of the Court's judicial style	622
The evolution of the Court's judicial style	624
Precedent and the Court of Justice	625
Background	625
Dealing with previous case law	627
General	627
Overruling	629
Reaffirming and distinguishing	630
A preliminary assessment	632
Precedent in the Court of First Instance	633
Concluding remarks	637
18. Judging Europe's Judges	639
The first phase: from consensus to qualified majority	639
Making the system work	639
Protecting the rights of individuals	642
The second phase: from QMV to EU	644
A reduced role for the Court?	644
The momentum of the case law	646
Making up for lost time	647
Protecting the institutional balance	648
The third phase: Maastricht and beyond	650
Conferred powers, subsidiarity and public opinion	650
The Court's reaction	654
A new phase? The Treaty of Nice and beyond	659
An alternative ending	662
Select bibliography	668
Index	683