

Contents

Preface	ix
1 The scope of linguistics	1
(i) A prospect for linguistics	1
(ii) Language, science, and ideology	4
(iii) Models and transformations	7
(iv) Spoken and written language	10
(v) Linguistics and society	13
2 Transformations and truth	15
(i) Transformations and reality	15
(ii) Some transformations of normal science; or, a brief essay in the sociology of knowledge	29
(iii) Functions of transformations	34
(iv) Sources and context	35
3 Language and processes: models for things that move	38
(i) Simple science	38
(ii) To think as a child	47
(iii) The rime of the ancient child	54
(iv) Complex fields	56
(v) Sources and context	60
4 Classification and control	62
(i) Classification and reality	62
(ii) Classification and class	65
(iii) Anti-language and anti-society	70
(iv) Structures of society, structures of language	77
(v) Sources and context	82

5	Utterances in discourse	85
	(i) Minimal classification	85
	(ii) Models of speech and power	91
	(iii) Sources and context	100
6	Classification as process	103
	(i) Operations	103
	(ii) Models and judgments	111
	(iii) Classification, location, and possession	116
	(iv) Sources and context	120
7	Reality, power, and time	122
	(i) Modality and power	122
	(ii) Time, tense, and history	128
	(iii) Sources and context	136
8	Negation	137
	(i) Visible dialectic	137
	(ii) Double-think	144
	(iii) Sources and context	151
	Bibliography	152
	Index	159