

Contents

Preface	vii
1 Introduction	1
2 Economic growth	36
2.1 Growth as an idea	38
2.2 Growth as a social process	47
2.3 Growth as a material process	59
2.4 The end of growth?	70
3 Critiques of growth	75
3.1 Ecological critique	79
3.2 Socio-economic critique	93
3.3 Cultural critique	104
3.4 Critique of capitalism	117
3.5 Feminist critique	133
3.6 Critique of industrialism	143
3.7 South–North critique	156
3.8 Growth critique outside of the degrowth debate	169
3.9 Why degrowth is different	176
4 Degrowth visions	178
4.1 Degrowth currents	181

4.2	Defining degrowth	191
4.3	Why degrowth is desirable	210
5	Pathways to degrowth	212
5.1	Democratization, solidarity economy, and commoning	215
5.2	Social security, redistribution, and caps on income and wealth	225
5.3	Convivial and democratic technology	229
5.4	Revalorization and redistribution of labour	232
5.5	Democratizing social metabolism	238
5.6	International solidarity	244
5.7	Why degrowth is viable	249
6	Making degrowth real	251
6.1	Nowtopias: Autonomous spaces and laboratories for the good life	255
6.2	Non-reformist reforms: Changing institutions and policies	262
6.3	Counter-hegemony: Building people power against the growth paradigm	267
6.4	Confronting crises: Beyond 'degrowth by design or by disaster'	276
6.5	Is degrowth achievable?	283
7	The future of degrowth	285
7.1	Class and race	289
7.2	Geopolitics and imperialism	291
7.3	Information technology	293
7.4	Democratic planning	295
7.5	Degrowth: A visionary pathway to post-capitalism	297
	Index	299