

Maps	2
Map 1: Physical relief of the Alps	10
Map 2: Political divisions in the Alps, before the 1803 Congress of Vienna	26
Map 3: Areas with surface area > 75 km ² in the Alps	27
Map 4: Forms of agriculture in the Alps, ca. 1900, according to the 1880 census	32
Map 5: Cities with 5000 or more inhabitants in the Alpine regions	37
Preface	I

Table of Contents

1. The Alps: A Historical Space?	5
Key questions and the state of the research	8
The political construction of territory	14
2. Population	23
Data and collection methods	24
Comparing long-term trends	34
3. Agriculture and Alpiculture	47
The intensity differential in the Alps	49
Cropping frequency and yields	55
The intensification of animal husbandry . . .	61
. . . and of plant cultivation	64
Technology	70
4. Cities	83
Statistics in the early modern era	85
Acceleration of growth	92
The slowing of urban growth	97
The nineteenth century	104

5. Environment and Development	114
An intermediate assessment: differentiated growth	115
Relations between the Alps and surrounding areas	119
History and ecological models	127
Illustrations	After p. 134
6. Two Agrarian Structures (Nineteenth Century)	135
Farming establishments	137
Public order and property	146
Inheritance law, collective resources	154
7. Territories during the Early Modern Period	161
Savoy: the duke, the notables	163
The Grisons: communes with subjects	171
Carinthia: Lord, peasant, servant	180
8. State Formation and Society	195
The European dimension	196
Politics as a factor of differentiation	205
Rural societies	209
9. History of the Alps from 1500 to 1900	222
A summary	222
Arguments and outlook	225
Appendices	229
Bibliography	241
Index	250