

Contents

Preface / xi
Author's Note / xvii

1. Libussa, or Versions of Origin / 3

What the Schoolchildren Learn
What Archaeologists and Historians Believe: Hypotheses and Reconstructions
The Fortunes of Libussa

2. Otakar's Prague, 880-1278 / 30

From Trading Post to Royal Residence
The Rise of a King
The Early Jewish Community and the Prague Tosafists
Czech Saints, Italian Rhetoricians, and German Poets
"... My kingdom stands on brittle glass"

3. The Carolinian Moment: Charles IV and His Age / 67

Burghers, Markets, and Cobbled Streets
Prince Václav or, Rather, Charles
King Charles, Father of His Motherland
The Founding of the New Town
Charles Establishes His University
The King's Kitchen Cabinet and the Italian Connection: Cola di Rienzo and Francesco Petrararch

Charles Builds His Myth
New Writing in Carolinian Prague
Cracks in the Facade
The Carolinian Jewish Town and the Massacre of 1389

4. The Hussite Revolution: 1415-22 / 118

The King and the Vicar-General
The Advance of the Religious Reformers
Jan Hus at Bethlehem
The Decree of Kutná Hora
Jan Hus at Constance
The Beginnings of Hussite Resistance
Prague Attracts the European Dissidents
The Revolt of the Prague Radicals
The Crusaders Arrive: The Battle on Žižka's Hill
The Battle for the Vyšehrad and the Death of Jan Želivský
Hussites and Jews, and a Coda

5. Rudolf II and the Revolt of 1618 / 171

Praga Mystica?
After the Polish Kings, the Hapsburgs Again
Rudolf in Ascendancy
Scientists in Prague: Tadeáš Hájek, Tycho Brahe, Johannes Kepler, and Jessenius
The Alchemists Come to Prague
The "Golden Age" of Prague's Jewish Community: Rabbi Judah Loew and
His Golem; Jewish Tradition and the New Sciences
Picaresque Prague and the Case of Baron Russwurm
The Last Years of Rudolf
The Revolt of 1618 and the Battle of the White Mountain
The Prague Baroque

6. Mozart in Prague / 237

Gli Italiani a Praga
A Third-Rate Place: War and Peace in the Provinces
The Age of Reforms: Mother and Son
Mozart at the Bertramka

7. 1848 and the Counterrevolution / 272

The Travelers, and What They Did Not See
Stormy Interlude: The Strikes of 1844
Revolution and Counterrevolution: 1848-49
Three Lives in the Shadow of the Revolution

8. T. G. Masaryk's Prague / 314

A Modernized City and a Literature of Ghosts
The Republic in Its Monday Best
Masaryk Returns to Prague
From the Coachman's Cottage to Prague Castle: A Modern Fairy Tale
Turbulent, Republican Prague
The Cultures of Republican Prague
Prague, September 21, 1937

Postscript. A Difficult Return to Prague / 365

Bibliography / 379
Index / 397