

CONTENTS

Preface vii

INTRODUCTION 1

- What is Art Criticism? 1
- The Search for Standard Features 3
- Distinctions and Overlaps between Art Criticism and Related Activities 5
- Art Criticism's Place in the Larger Field of Criticism 7
- What Can Art Criticism Offer? 10
- The Influence and Legitimacy of Criticism 13
- Critics and Responsibilities 15
- Who are Art Critics? 18
- Conclusions 21

Chapter 1 A HISTORY OF ART CRITICISM 23

- The Birth of a Genre 23
- Early Voices in Art Criticism 25
- Diderot and the Specter of Censorship 30
- English Art Criticism in the Later 1700s 31
- Politics with a Vengeance 32
- Romanticism versus Neoclassicism 34
- English Criticism: Hazlitt and Ruskin 36
- The Development of French Modernism 39
- The Rise of Formalist Criticism 44
- Paris in the Early 1900s 47
- European Criticism between the Wars 49
- American Criticism Comes of Age 50
- Abstract Expressionism and Harold Rosenberg 55
- ARTnews and the Poet-Critics 57
- Clement Greenberg and the Return of Formalism 59
- 1960s Formalism and Artforum 61
- Emerging Alternatives to Formalism 63
- Reenter Politics 65
- Early Feminist Criticism 67
- Neo-Marxism and October 69
- The 1980s and the Culture Wars 71
- Festivalism, Globalism, and Institutional Critique 74
- Art Criticism since 2000 77
- Conclusions 80

Chapter 2 DESCRIPTION AND CONTEXTUALIZATION 82

- General Issues Involving Description* 82
 - The Act of Description and Its Aims 82
 - Strategies of Description 83
- Internal and External Evidence* 85
 - Internal Evidence: The Medium and Formal Elements 87

Internal Evidence: Subject Matter and Content	91
External Evidence: Title, Price, Materials, and Intention	93
External Evidence: The Artist's Experiences, Categories, and Historical Context	97
External Evidence: Physical Context and Crowd Responses	100
External Evidence: Personal Responses	101
Complexities Involving Description	103
Evocative Description	103
Difficulties in Rendering the Visual in Verbal Terms	105
Description as Interpretation	107
The Costs of a Poor Description	109
Conclusions	110

Chapter 3 INTERPRETATION AND ANALYSIS 113

General Issues Involving Interpretation	113
Relations—and Distinctions—between Description and Interpretation	113
Criticism as Retrieval and as Revision	116
Judging Interpretations	118
Opposition to—and Support for—Interpretation	119
Interpretation and Intentionality	120
Interpretations Involving Internal and External Evidence	123
Iconographic Interpretation	124
Formal Analysis	125
Phenomenological Interpretation	126
The Status of External Evidence	127
Biographical Interpretation	128
Historicizing Interpretation: The Zeitgeist	130
Historicizing Interpretation: Cultural Context	131
Critical Theory and Systematic Interpretations	134
Psychoanalytic Interpretation	134
Feminist Interpretation	137
Marxist Interpretation	140
Structuralist and Semiotic Interpretation	143
Poststructuralist Interpretations	146
Conclusions	148

Chapter 4 JUDGMENT AND EVALUATION 152

The Place of Judgment in Criticism	152
Changing Attitudes about Judgment	153
The Contributions of Hume and Kant	155
Challenges to—and Revisions of—Kant	157
Claims about Universal and Personal Criteria	160
Early Examples of Common Criteria	162
Changing Criteria in the Nineteenth Century	165
Originality and Expressiveness Become Common Criteria	167
Early-Twentieth-Century Criteria	168
Recent Variations in the Use of Criteria	171
Forms of Judgment and Related Issues	174
Positive Judgment	175

Negative Judgment	177
Complexities Involving Judgment	182
Conclusions	185

Chapter 5 INDIVIDUAL CRITICAL STYLES: TONE AND VOICE 188

External Factors Affecting Criticism	188
Deadlines	188
Word and Space Limits	190
Contextual Considerations	192
Considerations of Audience	194
Institutional Ideologies	197
Tone, Voice, and the Relevance of External Factors	200
The Creation of Tone: Word Choice	202
The Creation of Tone: Person	204
The Creation of Tone: Punctuation	208
The Creation of Tone: Tense	210
The Creation of Tone: Syntax and Sentence Structure	210
The Creation of Tone: Further Strategies	212
Debates About Tone	213
Should Art Criticism Match Its Subject in Tone?	214
How Clear Should Art Criticism Be?	215
Conclusions	218

CONCLUSION 221

ANTHOLOGY 223

Denis Diderot, Selections from the Salons of 1765 and 1767	223
Charles Baudelaire, Selections from the Salon of 1846	235
John Ruskin, "Conclusion: Modern Art and Modern Criticism" (1843)	246
Guillaume Apollinaire, Two Articles on Picasso (1905)	253
Royal Cortisoz, "The Post-Impressionist Illusion" (1913)	256
Harold Rosenberg, "The American Action Painters" (1952)	259
Leo Steinberg, "Month in Review" (1956)	265
Hilton Kramer, "Critics of American Painting" (1959)	269
Clement Greenberg, "Modernist Painting" (1960)	274
Michael Fried, "Art and Objecthood" (1967)	279
Lucy Lippard, "The Women Artists' Movement—What Next?" (1975)	290
The Editors of October, "About October" (1976)	293
Suzi Gablik, "Beyond the Rectangle, Out of the Frame" (1995)	295
James Elkins, Excerpt from What Happened to art Criticism? (2003)	302

Glossary	310
----------	-----

Bibliography	326
--------------	-----

Index	339
-------	-----