PART I
Introducing the ESeC 1

1 The European Socio-economic Classification: a prolegomenon	3
DAVID ROSE, ERIC HARRISON AND DAVID PEVALIN
Introduction	3
What is a ‘socio-economic classification’?	4
Why is an ESeC needed?	6
The importance of conceptual approaches	8
The ESeC classes explained	10
The ESeC classes described	14
The validation of ESeC	21
The contributions to this book	29
Conclusions	36

2 From derivation to validation: evidence from the UK and beyond	39
ERIC HARRISON AND DAVID ROSE
From EGP to NS-SEC to ESeC	39
Measuring occupation cross-nationally using ISCO	41
Refining the classification: from eight to ten classes	43
ESeC in conditions of incomplete information	45

x Contents

Validating the schema in part and whole	49
Summary	58
Appendix: UK-LFS questions for validation of NS-SEC	59

3 The application of ESeC to three sources of comparative European data	61
---	----

RHYS DAVIES AND PETER ELIAS

Introduction	61
Information requirements	61
Description of data sources	63
Constructing ESeC: the derivation of employment status	64
Occupational composition	74
ESeC distributions	76
Allocating the non-employed to ESeC	79
Deriving a household ESeC	82
Concluding comments	85

PART II

Measuring social class	87
------------------------	----

4 Social class and employment relations: comparisons between the ESeC and EGP class schemas using European data	89
---	----

ERIK BIHAGEN, MAGNUS NERMO AND ROBERT ERIKSON

Introduction	89
Class and employment relationships	90
Data and variables	92
Results	95
Concluding remarks	103
Appendix A: ESS data: reductions of the sample size	105
Appendix B: Country-level analyses	105

5 Measuring social class: the case of Germany	114
---	-----

HEIKE WIRTH, CORNELIA GRESCH, WALTER MÜLLER,
REINHARD POLLAK AND FELIX WEISS

Introduction	114
The construction of the German national ESeC	116
The operationalization of the various versions of ESeC with the BIBB/IAB database	118
The employment relations (ER) indicators	119

Differences in OUG composition and class distribution between the German and the international variants of the ESeC classification 122

Criterion validity of the different ESeC versions 129

Discussion 133

6 The comparative measurement of supervisory status 138

REINHARD POLLAK, GERRIT BAUER, WALTER MÜLLER,
FELIX WEISS AND HEIKE WIRTH

Introduction 138

Measures of supervisory status and characteristics of supervisors identified 138

Operationalization of supervisory status in the ESS and LFS 148

Discussion 154

7 Stable and consistent with the employment relations theoretical background? Does the prototype ESeC show these qualities with French data? 158

CÉCILE BROUSSE, OLIVIER MONSO AND LOUP WOLFF

Introduction 158

Using automatic classification techniques to test prototype ESeC 159

Occupational mobility measured with prototype ESeC and an empirical classification: how much mobility does ESeC create? 168

Changes in supervisory functions since the 1980s: towards a trend in the growth of blurring in the ESeC prototype? 172

Appendix: The prototype ESeC and empirical classifications of wage earners 176

PART III

Using ESeC in comparative research on social class 179

8 The effectiveness of ESeC and EGP in clustering occupations: a study of occupational wage growth in Sweden 181

ERIK BIHAGEN AND MAGNUS NERMO

Introduction 181

Wage growth and class 182

Measuring the wage growth of occupations 183
