

Contents

Introduction

1

Part I

1. Freedom, Associations, and Uniformity

25

The Setting

25

Some Sources of Disagreement

29

Autonomy and Toleration

29

Whose Freedom?

31

The Sources of Law and Social Order

34

Discrimination and Diversity

40

2. Two Approaches

42

The Pure Liberal Theory of Freedom of Association

42

Why the Pure Theory is Not Satisfactory

47

Congruence

51

Why Congruence is Not Satisfactory

53

3. Reunderstanding Intermediate Groups

56

Treating Groups as Groups

56

Tendencies toward State Excess

61

Property and Wealth

61

Secrecy and Privacy

63

Transnationality

65

The Centralizing Temperament and the Man of System

66

Congruence Again

68

Tendencies toward Group Excess

71

Authority Generates Power

71

Pluralism Generates Power

74

Interested and Invasive Power

79

Part II

4. Antecedents and Foundations	87
The Birth of Intermediacy	89
The Roman Law	101
Facts and Norms	103
5. The Ancient Constitution, the Social Contract, and the Modern State	106
The Emergence of the State	106
Peers, Provinces, and Parlements	107
The Ancient Constitution	112
Corporatism and Parliaments	119
The Theorists of the Ancient Constitution	123
Ancient Constitutionalism and its Neighbors	133
6. Montesquieu and Voltaire, Philosophes and Parlements	141
The Early Eighteenth Century	142
Montesquieu	145
Voltaire	159
7. The Age of Revolutions	171
Smith, Burke, and Paine	172
Tracy and Constant	184
The United States	201
The Society of the Cincinnati	209
8. Centralization in a Democratic Age: Tocqueville and Mill	212
Tocqueville on Associations and Corps	215
Mill on Centralization and Local Despotism	217
9. From Liberal Constitutionalism to Pluralism	233
The British Pluralists	233
Lord Acton	236
Acton and the Pluralists	239
The Pluralist Theory of Group Life	244

Part III

10. The Constitution of Group Life	253
Intermediacy Affects Politics	254
Faction	255
The Illiberal Majority	256

Minority Group Capture	258
The Majoritarian State	260
Territory and Government	261
Politics and Balance	264
11. Associations are Not States	266
Complex Associations	266
Universities and Liberal Justice	271
State Action	278
Conclusion: Against Synthesis	283
Taylor and the "Long March"	285
Rawls and the Morality of Association	290
Hegel, Ethical Life, and Corporate Forms	292
Bibliography	297
Index	315