

Contents

Introduction	7
1 Visible and Invisible: Questions of Recognition	25
2 Real and Symbolic: Questions of Difference	67
3 Intelligence and Instinct: Questions of Power	113
Conclusion	159
References	167
Acknowledgements	181
List of Illustrations	182

In an aversion to animals the predominant feeling is fear of being recognized by them through contact. The horror that runs deep in man is an obscure awareness that in him something lives so akin to the animal that it might be recognized. All disgust is originally disgust at touching. Even when the feeling is mastered, it is only