

Contents

List of Figures	ix
List of Contributors	x
Acknowledgments	xiv

Introduction: Why We Need to Promote Interdisciplinary Dialogue in Contemporary Age Studies	1
--	---

PART I

What Does It Mean to Grow Old?	15
--------------------------------	----

1 Abolition, Women's Rights, and the Contested Value of Being Old in the Nineteenth-Century United States	17
--	----

CORINNE T. FIELD

Response 1: Abstracting Ageist Perceptions, Societal Ills, and Racist Burdens on the Psychological Well-Being of Black Women: Is "Successful" Aging Still an Option?	32
--	----

TAMARA A. BAKER

2 There Is No Such Thing as "the Elderly": Reading Age in Nineteenth-Century American Literature	41
---	----

SARI EDELSTEIN

Response 2: Intersectionality and Age	51
---------------------------------------	----

JULIA TWIGG

3 Cognition and Recognition in the Ethics of Dementia Care	58
--	----

BRUCE JENNINGS

Response 3: Philosophical Approaches to Dementia: Some Further Reflections on Agency and Identity	71
--	----

CHRIS GILLEARD

4 Agency and the Aging Artist	78
MICHAEL AND LINDA HUTCHEON
Response 4: The Art of Bending the Successful Aging Paradigm: Contemporary Older Artists and Their Continuing Creative Practices 90
AAGJE SWINNEN
PART II
Aging: Old Age and Disability	99
5 Estrangement: Towards an 'age theory' theatre criticism	101
ELINOR FUCHS
Response 5: Fuchs's Case for Stranger Visions 113
NEAL KING
6 Ableism and Ageism: Insights From Disability Studies for Aging Studies	118
JOEL MICHAEL REYNOLDS AND ANNA LANDRE
Response 6: Fears Generating Ageism and Ableism Are Well-Founded in a Society That Does Not Seek or Support Full Inclusion of All Persons 130
MICHELLE PUTNAM
7 In conversation With Sally Chivers: Reimagining long-term residential care	141
SALLY CHIVERS
Response 7: Aging and Caring Amid Words, Stories, and Texts 154
JANELLE S. TAYLOR
8 Queer Aging and the Significance of (Narrative) Representation	161
LINDA M. HESS
Response 8: What We Miss 174
DAVID J. EKERDT

PART III

Aging, Old Age, and Activism 179

- 9 Conceptualizing Ageism: From Prejudice and Discrimination to Fourth Ageism 181

PAUL HIGGS

- 10 Aging in the Anthropocene: Generational Time, Declining Longevity, Posthuman Aging 199

KATHLEEN WOODWARD

- Response 10: Aging in the Anthropocene: Geological Time, Generational Place 208

DANIEL HOORNWEG

- 11 Critical Conversations on Aging Futures: Decolonial Perspectives 214

MAY CHAZAN, TASHA BEEDS, AND JENN COLE

- Response 11: The Age of (Relentless) Responsibility 231

SANDY GRANDE

PART IV

Old Age and Humanistic Approaches to Care 239

- 12 Intimacy and Distance: Reflections on Eldercare in the United States 241

RÜDIGER KUNOW

- Response 12: Toward a Deeper Understanding of Care in Later Life 256

DES O'NEILL

- 13 Care Work and the Politics of Interdependence 263

AMANDA CIAFONE

- Response 13: Developing New Forms of Care: From Individual to Collective Agency 277

CHRIS PHILLIPSON

- 14 Posthuman Care and Posthumous Life in Marjorie Prime 283

AMELIA DEFALCO

Response 14: Only Persons Can Provide Person-Centered Care for People Living With Dementia: “Walter Prime” and His Ilk Miss the Mark	293
STEVEN R. SABAT
15 Risky Business: Bringing Transformative Creativity to U.S. Nursing Homes	299
KATE DE MEDEIROS AND ANNE BASTING
Response 15: Valuing Risk in Residential Long-Term Care: Setting an Important Ethical Standard for Supporting and Nurturing Human Flourishing	314
PIA KONTOS
Index	320