

Contents

Acknowledgements	viii
List of abbreviations	xii
Introduction	1
1 Collective memory as a resource for political change	25
Part I Origins and crisis diagnosis	49
2 Choosing integration based on the community model: memory, leadership, and the first phase of integration (1945–58)	51
3 Counter-memory and generational change: Eurosclerosis (1959–84) and the second phase of integration (1985–2003)	77
4 The fragmentation and loss of European memory: the Eurozone crisis, Brexit, and possible disintegration	106
Part II Memory and the future of Europe	139
5 Changing generations, negative memory, and non-economic resources	141
6 The future of Europe from a comparative perspective	167
Concluding remarks: a plea for politics at the European level	187
Select bibliography	203
Index	223