

Table of Contents

Contributors	xxi
Foreword	xxvii
Preface	xxix
Acknowledgments	xxxix
Introduction
Amelia H. Boss	1
I Goals of This Book	1
II Audience	2
III Benefits of Convention	3
IV Relationship of Model Law and Convention	3
V What the Convention Does, and What It Does Not Do	4
A Relationship to Existing Law	4
B No New Requirements	6
C Relationship to Other Electronic Commerce Legislation	7
VI Interpretation of the Convention	7
VII Some Likely Questions about the Convention	9
A Questions from Nations	9
B Questions from Businesses	10
C Questions from Legal Advisors and Practicing Attorneys	12
VIII Using This Book	12
A Website Addresses	12
B Glossary	13
C UN Documents	13

Part I: OverviewDrafting and Negotiating History of the Electronic Communications ConventionJosé Angelo Estrella Faria* 17

I	Introduction	17
II	The Economic Context of the ECC and Its Value for International Trade	19
III	Brief Overview of the ECC	22
	A The Philosophy and Basic Principles	22
	1 Functional Equivalence	22
	2 Media or Technology Neutrality	23
	3 Freedom of Contract	24
	B Main Topics Addressed by the ECC	25
	1 Location of the Parties	25
	2 Treatment of Contracts	25
	3 Timing of Dispatch and Receipt of Electronic Communications	26
	4 Relationship to Other International Instruments	27
IV	Background and Drafting History of the ECC	27
	A The UNCITRAL Model Laws: Their Influence and the Questions Still Open	28
	B The Drafting History of the UN Electronic Communications Convention	31
	1 Background	31
	2 Summary of Preparatory Work	33
	3 Early Stage of Deliberations	34
	C Relationship between the New Convention and Existing Treaties	36
	D The New Convention Takes Shape	37
	E The Final Round of Negotiations	39
	F Adoption by the UN General Assembly and Follow-Up Work by UNCITRAL	40

Part II: Section-By-Section CommentaryChapter I Sphere of Application 45

Article 1. Scope of Application 45
Amelia H. Boss

I	General Scope	46
II	When to Consult Convention	47
	A Rules of Private International Law Point to the Convention	47
	B Suit Is Brought in A Contracting State	50

III	Necessary International Characteristics	58
	A Determining the Location of the Parties	58
	B Parties in ‘Different States’	61
	1 One Party located in a Contracting State	61
	2 Neither Party in Contracting State	62
	3 Impact of an Article 19(1) Declaration	64
IV	Use of Electronic Communications	65
V	In Connection With the Formation or Enforcement of a Contract	66
	A Contract and Agreement	66
	B Formation or Performance	67
	1 Formation	67
	2 Performance	68
VI	Nature of Contract	69
VII	Parties Covered by Convention (Paragraph 3)	70
VIII	Application to Domestic Transactions	70
IX	Drafting History	71

Article 2. Exclusions73

Amelia H. Boss

I	Necessity of Exclusions	73
II	Retained Exclusions	74
	A Contracts for Personal, Family, or Household Purposes	74
	B Transactions Related to the Financial Sector	76
	C Contracts Related to Negotiable Instruments	77
III	Contemplated Exclusions Not Retained by Convention	78
	A Individual Exclusions Omitted Due to Redundancy or Deference to Domestic Legislation	78
	B Contracts Granting Limited Use of Intellectual Property Rights	79
	C General Exclusions	80
IV	Drafting History	81

Article 3. Party Autonomy83

Amelia H. Boss

I	General Scope	83
	A Altering the Scope of the Convention by Contract	83
	1 ‘Opting Out’ of the Convention	83
	B ‘Opting Into’ the Convention	85
	C ‘Choice of Law’ versus Article 3 ‘Party Autonomy’	88
II	Varying the Provisions of the Convention	90
	A General Right	90
	B Limitations	90
III	Party Autonomy to Refuse to Use Electronic Communications	95
IV	Drafting History	96

Chapter II General Provision	98
Article 4. Definitions	98
Ricardo Sandoval López
I Discussion	99
A General Scope	99
B Concept of a 'Data Message'	100
C Concept of 'Communication'	101
D The Concept of 'Electronic Communication'	102
E The Definitions of 'Originator and Addressee'	102
1 Originator	103
2 Addressee	104
F The Concept of 'Information System'	105
G Definition of 'Automated Message System'	105
H Concept of 'Place of Business'	108
II Drafting History	109
Article 5. Interpretation	111
Ricardo Sandoval López
I Need for Uniformity of Interpretation	111
II Use of Foreign Case Law to Interpret the Convention	112
III Good Faith	113
IV Matters Not Expressly Dealt With by the Convention	114
V Principles Upon which Convention is Based	115
VI Application of Otherwise Applicable Law	116
VII Drafting History	116
Article 6. Location of the Parties	118
Ricardo Sandoval López
I Ability of the Parties to Choose Location	119
II Multiple Places of Business	120
III Natural Persons	121
IV Irrelevance of Location of Communications System	121
V Drafting History	122
Article 7. Information Requirements	123
Ergun Özsunay
I Deferring to Domestic Law	123
II Background of Article 7	124
III Purpose of Article 7	125
A No Duty to Disclose	125

	B	Non-Discrimination and Facilitation of Electronic Commerce	125
	C	Principle of Good Faith	126
IV		Legal Consequences	126
V		Problems	126
VI		Nature of Legal Information Requirements	127
VII		Drafting History	127

Chapter III Use of Electronic Communications in International Contracts

129

Article 8. Legal Recognition of Electronic Communications

Gao Fuping

129

I		Discussion	129
	A	General Scope	129
	B	Meaning of Article 8	131
		1 Principle of Non-form Discrimination	131
		2 Principle of Party Autonomy	133
II		Drafting History	134

Article 9. Form Requirements

Thomas J. Smedinghoff

136

I		Discussion	137
	A	General Scope	137
		1 Functional Equivalence	137
		2 Technology Neutrality	139
	B	History of Article 9	139
	C	Interpretation of Article 9(1): General Form Requirements	141
		1 No New Form Requirements	141
		2 Impact on Existing Form Requirements	141
	D	Interpretation of Article 9(2): Writing Requirements	143
		1 Overview	143
		2 ECC Approach to ‘Writing’ Requirements	144
		3 Other Electronic Commerce Laws	145
	E	Interpretation of Article 9(3): Signature Requirements	146
		1 General Overview	146
		2 ECC Approach to ‘Signature’ Requirements	147
		a The ‘Method’	150
		b ‘Attributes’ the Method Must Possess	151
		i Identify the Party	151
		ii Indicate the Party’s Intent	152
		c Security – Reliable as Appropriate (or Proven in Fact)	154
	F	Interpretation of Articles 9(4) and 9(5): Original Requirements	156
		1 General Comments	156

2	ECC Approach to Requirements for an 'Original'	157
a	Integrity	158
b	Accessibility	159
c	Exclusion of Documents of Title and Negotiable Instruments	160
II	Drafting History	161
Article 10. Time and Place of Dispatch and Receipt of Electronic Communications		162
Wolfgang Kilian
I	Purpose	162
II	History of the Article	163
III	Interpretation	168
A	Dispatch	169
B	Time of Dispatch	169
C	Place of Dispatch	171
D	Receipt	171
E	Time of Receipt	173
F	Place of Receipt	175
IV	Drafting History	176
Article 11. Invitations to Make Offers		177
Ergun Özsunay
I	Basis of Article 11	177
II	Otherwise Applicable Law of Offer and Acceptance	178
A	Concepts of 'Offer'	178
B	'Invitation to Make Offers'	180
C	Criteria for Distinguishing Between 'Offer' and 'Invitation to Make Offers'	182
III	Drafting History	183
Article 12. Use of automated message systems for contract formation		184
Wolfgang Kilian
I	Purpose	184
II	Electronic Agents, Automated Message Systems, and Electronic Contracting	185
III	History of the Article	187
IV	Interpretation	189
A	Scope	189
B	Contract	189
C	Automated Message Systems	190

Table of Contents	xiii
D Interaction	190
E Validity and Enforceability	191
V Drafting History	191
Article 13. Availability of Contract Terms	193
Ergun Özsunay
I Overview	193
II Contract Terms in Electronic Commerce	194
A 'Data Message'	194
B Obligation to Provide the Contract Terms in eCommerce	195
C Sanctions for Failure to Make Contract Terms Available	195
1 Non-Interference with Domestic Requirements	195
2 Non-Interference with Lex Mercatoria	196
III Drafting History	197
Article 14. Error in Electronic Communication	198
John D. Gregory / Joan Remsu
I Purpose	198
II History of the Article	200
A Ability to Withdraw 'the Portion of the E-Communications' Sent in Error?	205
B Conditions for Exercising the Right of Withdrawal?	206
C Limitation Period for Exercising Remedy for Error?	207
D 'Other Law' Not Affected by the Special Rule for E-Communications?	207
III Interpretation	207
IV Conclusion	211
V Drafting History	211
Chapter IV Final Provisions	212
Article 15. Depositary	212
Sieg Eiselen
I Introduction to Chapter IV Final Provisions (Articles 15-25)	212
A Introduction	212
B Overview of the Main Elements	213
1 Diplomatic clauses	213
2 Declarations	214
3 Priority	214
4 Entry into Force and Temporal Scope	214
II Duties of the Depositary	214
III Drafting History	215

Article 16. Signature, Ratification, Acceptance, or Approval	216
Sieg Eiselen
I Signature, Ratification, Acceptance, or Approval	216
II Drafting History	217
Article 17. Participation by Regional Economic Integration Organizations	218
Sieg Eiselen
I Legislative History	218
II Scope and Purpose	219
III Meaning of ‘Regional Economic Integration Organization’	220
IV Coordination between Regional Economic Integration Organizations and Member States	221
V Relationship between the Convention and Rules Enacted by Regional Economic Integration Organizations	222
VI Drafting History	223
Article 18. Effect in Domestic Territorial Units	225
John D. Gregory / Joan Remsu
I Purpose	225
II History	226
A History of Clauses in Other International Instruments	226
B History of Article 18 in Electronic Communications Convention	227
C History of Use of Multi-Unit State Clauses	228
III Interpretation	229
A Features of Multi-Unit State Clauses	229
B Practical Considerations and Benefits of Multi-Unit State Clauses	231
IV Conclusion	232
V APPENDIX: Multi-Unit State Clauses by Convention	233
VI Drafting History	236
Article 19. Declarations on the Scope of Application	237
Chris Connolly
I Introduction	237
II Overview	238
III Discussion	238
IV Drafting History	239

Article 20. Communications Exchanged under Other International Conventions

241

Chris Connolly

I	Overview	242
II	Discussion	242
III	Conclusion	243
IV	Drafting History	243

Article 21. Procedure and Effects of Declarations

245

Christopher Kuner

I	Time of Declaration	245
II	Manner of Declaration	248
III	Effectiveness of Declaration	248
IV	Drafting History	249

Article 22. Reservations

250

Christopher Kuner

I	Ban on Reservations	250
II	Drafting History	250

Article 23. Entry into Force

252

Christopher Kuner

I	Date Convention Enters into Force	252
II	Ratification after Entry into Force	253
III	Drafting History	254

Article 24. Time of Application

255

Christopher Kuner

I	No Retroactivity	255
II	Drafting History	256

Article 25. Denunciations

257

Christopher Kuner

I	Manner and Effectiveness of Denunciation	257
II	Drafting History	258
	Testimonium	258
III	Commentary: Testimonium	259

Part III: Perspectives on the Electronic Communications Convention

The United States' Perspective on the Convention on the Use of Electronic Communications in International Contracts Amelia H. Boss	263
---	-----

I	Introduction	263
II	The Relationship between United States and International Law-Making Efforts in Electronic Commerce	264
III	United States Support for International Law-Making	266
IV	The Products: Compatibility of the Convention with Domestic Law	269
	A Underlying Principles	269
	B Specific Provisions	271
	1 Scope	272
	2 Terminology	273
	3 Party Autonomy	273
	4 Information Requirements	274
	5 Legal Recognition and Validity of Use of Electronic Communications; Form Requirements	275
	a Generally	275
	b Writing Requirements	276
	c Signature Requirements	277
	d Original Document Requirements	278
	6 Time and Place of Receipt and Dispatch	279
	7 Recognition of Use of Automated Message Systems	281
	8 Error Resolution	281
V	Challenges in United States Enactment	283
VI	Some Additional Thoughts on Interpretation	286
VII	Chart of Comparable Provisions of ECC, E-SIGN, and UETA	289

Using the Electronic Communications Convention to Harmonize National and International Electronic Commerce Laws: An ASEAN Case Study Chris Connolly	315
--	-----

I	Introduction	315
	A Overview of the ASEAN Electronic Commerce Project	316
	B Objectives of Harmonisation	316
	C Harmonisation in Practice	317
II	The ASEAN Experience	318
	A Background	318
	B Recommendations	319
	1 Recommendation A: Consider Signing the ECC	320

2	Recommendation B: Adopt One Law for Both Domestic and International Contracts	320
3	Recommendation C: Minimize Exemptions to Electronic Contracting Law	321
D	Implementation Tools	322
1	Implementation Guidelines and Checklists	322
2	Implementation Training Exercises	324
E	ASEAN Implementation Progress	325
III	Conclusion	329

The Interaction between the Electronic Communications Convention and the United Nations Convention on the International Sale of Goods

Sieg Eiselen	333
---------------------	-----

I	Introduction	333
II	Scope of the ECC and CISG	335
A	Scope: International Transactions	335
B	Scope: Parties	339
C	Party Autonomy and Freedom of Form	340
D	Declarations on Scope	342
III	Legal Recognition	343
IV	Contract Formation	345
A	Introduction	345
B	Time and Place of Contracting	346
C	Use of Automated Message Systems	349
D	Inclusion of Standard Terms	350
E	Conclusion	351

A Developing Country Perspective: The Impact of Electronic Communications Convention on Legislation in the South Asian Region

Jayantha Fernando	353
--------------------------	-----

I	Introduction	353
II	Sri Lankan Experience	355
A	Sri Lanka's Approach to Electronic Commerce Legislation	356
B	Consideration of the Convention in Sri Lankan Legislation	357
C	The ECC and the Sri Lankan Electronic Transactions Act	358
1	Scope of Application	358
2	Exclusions	359
3	Definitions and Interpretations	360
4	Location of Parties and Information Requirements	362

5	Treatment of Contracts	362
a	Legal Recognition of Electronic Communications	362
b	Invitation to Make Offers	363
c	Use of Automated Message Systems for Contract Formation	365
6	Form Requirements – Legal Recognition of Electronic Equivalents	365
7	Admissibility of Electronic Communications	368
8	Time and Place of Dispatch and Receipt of the Communication	371
9	Availability of Contract Terms and Input Errors	373
III	Indian Approach to Electronic Commerce Legislation	374
A	Key Concerns Relating to the Indian IT Act	375
B	Legislative Reforms in India (2005-2006)	376
C	The ECC and the Indian IT Act	378
1	Scope of Application & Definitions	379
2	Exclusions	379
3	Location of Parties	380
4	Treatment of Contract	380
5	Form Requirements	381
6	Admissibility of Electronic Documents	382
7	Time and Place of Dispatch and Receipt of the Communication	382
IV	Concluding Remarks	383
Implementation of the Electronic Communications Convention: A Chinese Perspective
	Gao Fuping	385
I	Introduction	385
II	Nationalizing the Model Law: Comparison of the ESL and the ECC	388
A	Legal Recognition of Electronic Communications	389
1	The ECC's Provision	389
2	China's Comparable Provision on Legal Recognition of Electronic Communications	390
B	Requirement for Electronic Contracts as Writing Form	391
1	The ECC's Provision on Writings	391
2	China's Comparable Provision on Writings	392
C	Signature Requirements for Electronic Contracts	393
1	The ECC's Provisions on Signatures in Electronic Contracts	393
2	China's Comparable Provision on Signatures	395
D	Original Form Requirement for Electronic Contracts	396
1	The ECC's Provision on Originals	396
2	China's Comparable Provision on Originals	398

III	Pre-condition of the ECC's Implementation in China: Implementing the ESL	398
A	Obstacles to Enforcement of the ESL in China	399
1	Unpopularity of Digital Signatures	399
2	Misunderstanding of the ESL	400
3	Shortage of Implementing Rules for Judiciary Practices	401
B	Implementing the ESL and the ECC in China's Court	402
1	Developing Electronic Evidence Rules	402
2	Improving Commercial Practices	404
IV	Conclusion	405

The Electronic Communications Convention: A European Union Perspective

Wolfgang Kilian

407

I	The European Union as a Regional Economic Organization	407
II	Negotiations between UNCITRAL and the European Union	408
III	Competence of the European Union to Harmonize Contract Law	409
IV	The 'Disconnection Clause': Background and Pretence	410
V	The Electronic Communications Convention as the Subject of a Mixed Agreement	414

ICC Perspectives on the United Nations Electronic Communications Convention

Christopher Kuner

415

I	ICC and the Development of International Commercial Law	415
II	ICC Involvement in UNCITRAL Work on Electronic Contracting	416
III	ICC eTERMS 2004	418
IV	Conclusions	421

Trade Usages under the Electronic Communications Convention

Dr. Paul Przemysław Polański

423

I	Introduction	423
II	Interrelation between the ECC and Trade Usages	425
A	Agreement to Use Electronic Communications (Article 8)	426
B	Electronic Signature (Article 9)	427
C	Receipt of Electronic Communications (Article 10)	428
D	Invitation to Make Offers (Article 11)	428

	E	Availability of Contract Terms (Article 13)	429
	F	Input Error (Article 14)	430
	G	Other Examples of Potential Trade Usages Supplementing the ECC	431
III		Trade Usages under the ECC	432
IV		The Ambiguity Surrounding the Status of Lex Mercatoria	434
	A	Negative Interpretation	435
	B	Supportive Interpretation	436
V		Conclusions	437

The Role of Information Security in the Electronic Communications Convention

	Thomas J. Smedinghoff	439
--	------------------------------	-----

I		Basic Information Security Concepts	440
	A	Authentication of Identity	441
	B	Availability of Data	442
	C	Assurance of Data Integrity	442
II		Role of Information Security in the ECC	443
III		Key Security Principles in the ECC	444
	A	Security is a Relative Concept	444
	1	Developing Global Trends	444
	2	ECC Implementation	446
	B	Security is Not a Guarantee	447
	C	Identity Can Be Addressed Separately from Signature	448
	D	Data Integrity Can Be Addressed Separately from Signature	450
	E	After-the-fact Proof is an Acceptable Alternative to Security	451

Appendices

Appendix A:	United Nations Convention on the Use of Electronic Communications in International Contracts	453
Appendix B:	List of Signatories to the Electronic Communications Convention	465
Appendix C:	Electronic Communications Convention Travaux Préparatoires	467
Appendix D:	List of Participants in the Drafting of the Electronic Communications Convention	473
Appendix E:	UNCITRAL Model Law on Electronic Commerce 1996	483
Appendix F:	Domestic Enactments of the UNCITRAL Model Law on Electronic Commerce	493
Appendix G:	Glossary of Terms	497

Bibliography

Index