

Contents

List of figures	viii
List of tables	ix
List of box	x
Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction	xiii
1 Post-communism – clientelism, party and state capture	1
1.1 Post-communism – a unique transition	2
1.2 Transition strategies: Central Europe and the Russian sphere	6
1.3 Informal networks, informal politics	8
1.4 The informal predatory nomenklatura	10
1.5 The informal ‘client-client’ pattern	13
1.6 Post-1989 clientelism – corruption and patronage	15
1.7 State capture – the clientelist version	21
1.8 Party capture: the firm-party-firm pattern	25
1.9 Post-communist alternatives in Central Europe	27
1.10 Concluding remarks	29
2 Party capture: privatisation ‘from below’	31
2.1 Party privatisation ‘from below’	32
2.1.1 Recruitment of ‘fake’ party members	32
2.1.2 Withdrawal of licences in the ODS in 2013	39
2.1.3 Withdrawal of licences in the ODS in 2014	47
2.1.4 Regional bosses – a new layer	48
2.1.4.1 The regional boss – the narrow and broad approach	49
2.1.4.2 The regional boss – godfather	51
2.1.4.3 The regional boss – trader	52
2.1.4.4 The regional boss – authentic party politician	53

- 2.1.5 National bosses 54
- 2.1.6 The 'Kens' – an appendage of the bosses 55
- 2.1.7 A list of selected bosses 56
- 2.1.8 The new black marketeering 58
- 2.1.9 Decline of the bosses – what next? 59

3 Party capture: colonisation 'from above'

63

- 3.1 Pro-business politics – oligopolies and monopolies 64
 - 3.1.1 Actors of colonisation 'from above' – the example of ČEZ 66
 - 3.1.2 ČEZ, Škoda Holding, I&C Energo and Appian 72
 - 3.1.3 ČEZ, J&T and Czech Coal 74
- 3.2 A comparison: party privatisation and colonisation 76
- 3.3 Political and economic cartels 78
- 3.4 Concluding remarks 80

4 The clientelist party, clientelist parliamentarism and clientelist regime

83

- 4.1 The client-client relationship 84
- 4.2 The triangle: parties-business-civil service 85
- 4.3 Concentric circles of clientelist networks 87
- 4.4 The contagion of clientelism 91
- 4.5 Structural corruption 93
- 4.6 Security and surveillance potential 96
- 4.7 Reduction of the significance of elections 98
- 4.8 Business and parasitic functions 100
- 4.9 A modified concept of fundamental cleavages 101
- 4.10 The party organisational model – confederation 104
- 4.11 Clientelist parliamentarism 106
- 4.12 Clientelist democracy 108
- 4.13 The concept of the clientelist party 109
- 4.14 A modified political system 112
- 4.15 Concluding remarks 113

5 "Old parties in new party systems?"

120

- 5.1 The new parties – a theoretical framework 121
- 5.2 Central Europe: "old parties in new party systems?" 125
- 5.3 Central Europe: a new party subsystem 128
- 5.4 'Flash' and 'start-up' parties 132
- 5.5 From mass to modern elite parties 133

- 5.6 Dis/continuity with the clientelist past 136
 - 5.6.1 The business-firm party: ANO 138
 - 5.6.2 ANO's positive and negative potentials 142
 - 5.6.3 Quo vadis ANO? 145
- 5.7 Concluding remarks 147

Conclusion

150

- 6.1 Three critical political junctures 151
 - 6.1.1 The second political juncture – since 2000 153
 - 6.1.2 The third political juncture – since 2015 158
- 6.2 The myth of referenda: the deconstruction of representative democracy 161
- 6.3 The danger of anti-corruption crusades 164
- 6.4 Dahrendorf: an authentic civil society 166

Bibliography

168

Index

192