

Contents

Contents	3.
Preface	5.
Research methodology	6.
About the structure of this volume	7.
I. Students' relationship to democracy	9.
I. 1. Introduction	9.
I. 2. The most important results from the interviews and focus group discussions.	10.
I. 3. Full-time college and university students' opinions of democracy	14.
I. 4. Lack of evaluation and its negative effects on students' views of the "existing" democracy.	17.
II. Interest in public and political life	21.
II. 1. The model of interest in public affairs	23.
II. 2. The model of interest in politics	24.
II. 3. Which news portals do voters of different political parties favor?	24.
III. Hungarian university and college students' values	26.
III. 1. Methodological framework	26.
III. 2. Results of the study	27.
III. 2. 1. What do we know about post-materialistic students?	28.
III. 2. 2. What do we know about materialistic students?	28.
III. 2. 3. How do we characterize people with mixed values?	30.
Briefly about green youth	30.
IV. Political participation among hungarian youth	31.
IV. 1. Traditional participation	33.
IV. 1. 1. Level of organization	33.
IV. 1. 2. Participation in elections	36.
IV. 2. Collective participation	37.
IV. 3. Virtual participation	40.
IV. 3. 1. What factors influence youth activism online?	42.
IV. 3. 2. With what can we associate college students' participation in organized protests?	45.
IV. 4. Conclusion: participation structure of hungarian students	46.
V. Distribution of party preferences among hungarian college and university student	49.
V. 1. Jobbik	51.
V. 2. Fidesz	53.
V. 3. Együtt 2014–PM	56.
VI. Conclusion	64.
VI. 1. Political activeness of hungarian youth	64.
VI. 2. Important conclusions from this study	67.
Appendices	70.
Bibliography	76.
Figures and tables	80.
About the authors	82.