

Contents

List of Figures	xi
Abbreviations	xii

FIRST-GENERATION RAMISM

1. Introduction: The Earliest German Ramism	3
1.i. Ramism in Germany: a neglected tradition	3
1.ii. Ramism and Calvinism: an overworked explanation	16
1.iii. The spread of Ramism in north-western Germany: a fresh start	25
2. Foundations: Ramism in German Context, 1543–1600	38
2.i. The rudiments of Ramism	38
2.ii. Ramism and humanism, c.1580–1600	51
2.iii. Ramism in Hanseatic cities and imperial counties	68

SECOND-GENERATION SEMI-RAMISM

3. Institutionalization: Semi-Ramism in Reformed Academies, 1580–1600	101
3.i. Evolution: the advent of Philippo-Ramism	101
3.ii. Confessionalization: Ramism and Calvinism revisited	108
3.iii. Expansion: Ramism and the encyclopaedia	114
4. Adaptation: Post-Ramist Methods in Reformed Universities, 1590–1613	127
4.i. Beyond Philippo-Ramism: Casmann, Timpler, Keckermann, and Alsted	127
4.ii. 'Methodical Peripateticism': Heidelberg and Keckermann's systema , 1590–1601	136
4.iii. Precursor to the Encyclopaedia : Danzig and Keckermann's Systema systematum , 1602–1613	153

THIRD-GENERATION POST-RAMIST ECLECTICISM

5. Compilation: Alsted's Cursus philosophici encyclopaedia, 1609–1620	169
5.i. Form: the Encyclopaedia as systema systematum	169
5.ii. Composition: the Encyclopaedia as bibliotheca universalis locorum communium	186
5.iii. Matter: the Encyclopaedia as bibliotheca philosophica	200
6. Culmination: Alsted's Encyclopaedia septem tomis distincta, 1620–1630	225
6.i. Synthesis: the Encyclopaedia as systema harmonicum	225
6.ii. Expansion: from Cursus philosophici encyclopaedia (1620) to Encyclopaedia omnium disciplinarum (1630)	246
6.iii. Dissolution: the Encyclopaedia as Farragines disciplinarum	254
7. Interim Conclusions	274
7.i. Destruction and further ramification, 1622–1670	274
7.ii. Common principles: means and ends of the German post-Ramist tradition	277
Select Bibliography	295
Index	307