

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
List of Tables	xi
List of Abbreviations	xii
Introduction	1
Objectives and Approach of the Book	4
Recognizing New States: General Findings	7
Recognizing New States and Self-Determination of Peoples	9
International Society Scholarship on Recognizing States	14
Structure of the Book	15
1. State Recognition Prior to 1815	23
Recognizing the United States of America	26
The French Revolution and the Congress of Vienna	36
Conclusion	41
2. New States in Latin America	49
Spanish American Revolutions	51
US Recognition of Spanish American Republics	54
British Recognition of Spanish American Republics	58
Recognizing Brazil	63
Uti Possidetis Juris	66
Conclusion	68
3. New States in Nineteenth-Century Europe	79
The Area of the Vienna Settlement	80
Recognizing Belgium	80
Italian Unification	85
German Unification	91
Ottoman Europe	96
Recognizing Greece	96
Recognizing Romania, Serbia, and Montenegro	99
Conclusion	106
4. New States Between 1918 and 1945	117
Woodrow Wilson and Self-Determination as a Positive International Right	119
Recognizing Poland, Czechoslovakia, and Yugoslavia	122
Recognizing States Emergent from the Russian Empire	132
The Stimson Doctrine of Non-Recognition	135
Conclusion	138

5. New States in Decolonization After 1945	147
Decolonization and State Recognition	150
Uti Possidetis Juris as the New “Dynastic Legitimacy”	160
Conclusion	168
6. New States in the Post-Cold War Period	179
Recognition and Non-Recognition in the Former Soviet Union	181
Recognition and Non-Recognition in the Former SFRY	189
Justifying Territorial Integrity and Self-Determination of Peoples	204
Conclusion	219
Bibliography	229
Index	245