

Contents

Foreword by Robert M. Sapolsky	ix
Preface	xiii
Acknowledgments	xvii
1 Charting a New Direction	1
2 Do Nonwarring Societies Actually Exist?	10
3 Overlooked and Underappreciated: The Human Potential for Peace	21
4 Killer Apes, Cannibals, and Coprolites: Projecting Mayhem onto the Past	33
5 The Earliest Evidence of War	50
6 War and Social Organization: From Nomadic Bands to Modern States	65
7 Seeking Justice: The Quest for Fairness	81
8 Man the Warrior: Fact or Fantasy?	100
9 Insights from the Outback: Geneva Conventions in the Australian Bush	113
10 Void if Detached . . . from Reality: Australian "Warriors," Yanomamö Unokais , and Lethal Raiding Psychology	131

viii Contents

11	Returning to the Evidence: Life in the Band	148
12	Darwin Got It Right: Sex Differences in Aggression	166
13	A New Evolutionary Perspective: The Nomadic Forager Model	175
14	Setting the Record Straight	193
15	A Macroscopic Anthropological View	201
16	Enhancing Peace	213
	Appendix 1: Organizations to Contact	235
	Appendix 2: Nonwarring Societies	237
	Notes	239
	Suggested Reading	322
	Index	323