

Contents

List of tables	viii
Introduction: what are international relations and why study them?	1
1 (Ir)rationality of international politics	4
Studying international relations: nuances of methodology and levels of analysis	4
Irrational people and rational decisions they take. Models of decision-making in foreign policy	7
Expected utility theory and prospect theory	11
Behavioral revolution in theory of international relations	14
Recommended reading	18
2 Realism	19
The philosophy of realism	20
Reinhold Niebuhr, Edward Carr and Hans Morgenthau: the principles of classical realism	25
Neorealism. Kenneth Waltz's theory of international politics	29
Security dilemma	32
International relations in the realist paradigm	35
Recommended reading	38
3 Is it all about power?	39
Where is power?	39
Basics of power calculations	43
Great powers in international politics	47
Balance of power theory	51
Recommended reading	54

4 Neoliberalism	56
Philosophy of neoliberalism	56
Norman Angell and Woodrow Wilson: theory of idealism	61
Complex interdependence theory	65
Democratic peace theory	68
International relations in the neoliberal paradigm	71
Recommended reading	74
5 English school	75
Hugo Grotius: natural law, rationality and justice	75
Hedley Bull: anarchy, order and system	78
History matters. Methodological pluralism of the English school	81
International society	83
Recommended reading	86
6 Institutionalism	87
Institutionalism of rational choice	88
Theory of regimes	91
Functionalism and neofunctionalism	94
Hegemonic stability theory	97
Recommended reading	100
7 Constructivism	102
Ontology of constructivism	103
Socially constructed world	105
Identity and cultural norms	108
Strategic culture	110
Soft power	113
Recommended reading	117
8 Marxism and neo-Marxism	118
Karl Marx: materialism and capitalism	118
Theory of imperialism	121
Dependency theory	125
World-system analysis	129
Recommended reading	132
9 Critical theories	133
Jurgen Habermas: communicative action and post-national constellation	134
Coxian critical theory	137

Andrew Linklater: normative theory	140
Critical international relations theory	142
Recommended reading	145
10 Feminism	146
Gender identity and power	146
What if all presidents were women?	149
Feminism on war and peace	151
Multiple focuses of feminism in IR	153
Recommended reading	156
11 Non-Western approaches	158
Why is Western IR not enough?	159
Chinese school of international relations	162
Islamic paradigm	166
The Global South perspective	171
Russian theory of international relations: project in the making	175
What's next? An epilogue	180
Bibliography	183
Index	189