

Contents

Preface to the English Edition	xi
Chapter I
Introduction	1
1. The Discipline of History: Canons and Divergences	1
2. The Problem of Continuity: Theories of Origin and Political Imperatives	9
3. In the Shadow of the Empire	12
4. Describing the Network: The Ottoman Framework and Its Collapse	15
Chapter II
The Iconoclast Byzantium of Greek Nationalism	25
1. Manuel Gedeon's Perception of History	25
2. A Periodization	30
3. Zambelios's Transcendent Byzantium: From Aristotle to Hegel	34
4. Paparrigopoulos's Phanariot Byzantium and French Imperial Nationalism	46
5. France and Russia in Constantinople: Toward an Interpretation of the Great Idea	51
6. Helleno-Ottomanism: The Response of Constantinople	53
7. Heretical Byzantium in The History of the Greek Nation	63
8. Iconoclasm as a Conspiracy of the Monarchy	71
9. Iconoclasm as Reformation	75
10. Gedeon's Medieval Hellenism: The Zambelios–Paparrigopoulos Scheme and the Ottoman Divergence	80
11. Footnotes: The Denunciation of Helleno-Orthodoxy	87
12. Byzantium as a Metaphor: Greeks and Slavs	88
13. The Iconoclast Byzantium and the Break from Greek Historiography	93
14. Byzantium as a Metonymy: The Church and the Ottoman State	98
15. Ecumenism as a Romantic Reconstruction	105
16. Histories of the Ottoman Empire	116
Chapter III
The “Medieval Antiquity” of Bulgarian Historiography	125
1. The Canon of Bulgarian Historiography: The Origin Model	125
2. Bulgarians: Vandals, Illyrians, or Macedonians?	129
3. Drinov's History: The Slavicization of Bulgarians	132

4. Krâstevich's Thesis: The Bulgarians Are Huns (The Positive Use of Byzantine Chronography)	147
5. Drinov's Thesis: The Bulgarians Are Slavs (The Negative use of Byzantine Chronography)	160
6. Krâstevich's Response: The Huns Are Slavs	164
7. The Romantic Reconstruction of Imperial Discourse: Some Conclusions	168
8. Povestnost instead of Historiya : Georgi Rakovski's Hyper-Hermeneutic Model ...	171
9. The Balkans as East: Charilaos Dimopoulos's History of the Bulgarians	178

Chapter IV

Byzantinisms and the Third Rome: Russian Imperial Nationalism	189
1. Konstantin Leont'ev: On the Edge of Two Epistemological Paradigms	189
2. Leont'ev's Byzantism	193
3. The Middle Ages as Canonical Model	198
4. Byzantism as Imperial Discourse: The Parity of Russians and Ottomans	199
5. Leont'ev's Slavism : Greeks/Bulgarians, Germans/Czechs	203
6. The Three Romes	208
7. A Romantic Reconstruction of History: The Vindication of the Persians	210
8. Leont'ev and Marko Balabanov: Byzantism as a Bridge	219
9. The Meaning of Progress and the Possibility of an Ottoman Nation	226
10. Byzantium and the "Groundless Accusation of Ethno-Phyletism"	233
11. Balabanov and Renan: "The Balkans Will Turn into a Volcano"	237
12. Byzantium and the Great Idea: The Serbian Perspective	248
13. Ivan I. Sokolov's Byzantinism	253
14. Pan-Orthodox Ecumenism and Byzantinisms: Gedeon's Two Moments	256

Chapter V

The "Roman Byzantium" of the Albanian Historiography	261
1. Namik Kemal and Renan	261
2. The Rupture of Pan-Islamic Ecumenism: Şemseddin Sami vs. Sami Frashëri	264
3. Between Ancient Greeks and Modern Europeans: Islamic Civilization as a Mediator	267
4. The "De-Arabification" of Islam	277
5. The Management of Time and Space in Islam	279
6. From the Islamic Ummah to the Albanian Nation: The Return of the Pelasgians	283
7. The Problem of Discontinuity in Albanian History	288
8. Konstantinos Paparrigopoulos and the Pelasgians	293
9. The De-Islamification of Albanian History	297
10. Pan-Islamic Ecumenism and Roman Byzantium: The Immanence of Empire	301

Chapter VI

Byzantium as Second Rome: Orientalism and Nationalism in the Balkans	305
1. From the Daco-Getae to the Romanians: In the Shadow of the First Rome	307
2. A. D. Xenopol: The Slavic Middle Ages and Phanariot Modernity	309
3. Nicolae Iorga's Byzance après Byzance : Invoking the Second Rome	316
4. Mehmed Ziya Gökalp's "Canon": The Rupture with the Imperial Middle Ages	322
5. M. Fuad Köprülü's "Opposition": The Reappropriation of the Ottoman Middle Ages	325
6. Nationalism, the Other Face of Orientalism: The Persians' Return	330
7. Kemalist Nationalism: The Prevalence of Origin over Continuity	332

Chapter VII

Iconoclasts against Iconolaters: Conclusions	337
1. Imperial Iconolaters and Nationalist Iconoclasts	337
2. M. Fuad Köprülü: The Iconoclasts as Muslims	338
3. Nicolae Iorga: The Iconoclasts as the Organizers of National Discourse	342
4. The Icon as the Hegemon's Representation	347
5. Historiographical Divergences and the Empire's Memory	349

Bibliography	357
Index	383