Contents

List of figures vii
List of tables viii
List of contributors ix

1 Introduction: setting the scene 1
Simona Kukovič and Petr Just

2 Political elites, leadership, and the rise of populism 10
Matevž Tomšič

3 Right-wing populism in Austrian politics: traditional and recent aspects 24
Karin Liebhart

4 Explaining the rise of populist parties in the 2013 and 2017 Czech parliamentary elections: economic grievances and political protest? 39
Petr Bláha, Jakub Charvát and Pavel Maškarinec

5 A few populist statements don't make a populist? The issue of corruption in (non-)populist communication of Czech president Miloš Zeman 53
Vladimír Naxera

6 Re-nationalization or de-Europeanization? Collective identities and identity politics in contemporary Hungary 67
Boglárka Koller

7 Comparative nationalism and populism: Hungary and Romania as a case study 83
Zoltán Vörös and Zoltán Bretter

8 Populist political leadership and political parties in Lithuania 99
Ingrida Unikaitė-Jakuntavičienė

9 Fear determinants of populism in Poland: voters' perspective 115
Agnieszka Turska-Kawa

10 Nationalism and populism in Poland: new threats, old fears 128
Agnieszka Kasińska-Metryka and Rafał Dudała

11 Populism in the context of the radicalization of society in CECs: a case study of populist elements in the social media communication of Slovak political actors 144
Jaroslav Ušiak and Petra Jankovská

12 Toward exclusion or inclusion? Acceptance and perception of national populist parties in Slovakia: the case study of the Kotlebists – People's party our Slovakia (L'SNS) 160
Petr Just

13 The secret of success: Slovenian populist political parties 173
Simona Kukovič

14 Anti-modern and anti-liberal narratives from the pre-communist past as the source of the contemporary populist and illiberal agenda in Central Europe 186
Ladislav Cabada

15 Conclusion: populism from the periphery to the mainstream 202
Miro Haček

Index 209