Contents

A	Preface	ix
	Acknowledgments	xi
	Introduction: Philosophy in Troubled Times	3
1	On an Asubjective Phenomenology	21
2	On the Body	61
3	On the Three Movements of Human Existence	83
4	On the Care for the Soul	127
5	On Sacrifice	171
6	On Hope	203
7	On Dissidence	229
	Conclusion: Legacies	255
	Epilogue	263
	Notes	267
	Index	295

philosophers when many years may littenduced me to the rice of philos-notes as a figure condition. There are sure platementalized spirits who have the telegraph of the second of the second nemed with the presentation of the present the present the present to the present the pres

for reasons of the history that we atherwise managed harrists to innore the reaches the reachest at their stanfers. I have not shared their expensesces, i an the product of a very different time, and a very different place than

As the same time as I dedicate my modest offerings in this brock to