

Contents

Foreword	viii
Before you start	xi
1 Teaching adults today – the context	1
From certainty to uncertainty	1
From deficit to diversity and back again	1
From (adult) education to (lifelong) learning	5
Exploring the context of your teaching	10
Three main parties	13
Further reading	15
Appendix: Taxonomy	16
2 A contract to learn	17
Adult participation is voluntary and purposeful	17
A contract to learn	19
Making and interpreting the contract	24
Writing a contract of learning	35
Further reading	37
3 Perceptions of adult education	38
The search for understanding: adult education	38
Adult	44
Education	50
Adult education	60
Further reading	66
4 Adult students	67
Student profiles	67
Lifespan studies	70
General characteristics of adult student learners	79
Implications for the teacher of adults	92
Further reading	93
5 The nature of learning	95
Learning and change	96
Learner-based theories	99
Context-based theories	113

vi TEACHING ADULTS

Knowledge-based theories	117
Process-based theories	119
Diversity of ways of learning	127
Further reading	128

6 From learning to teaching	129
Learning and life	129
Learning episodes	133
Two different kinds of learning	138
The uniqueness of adult learning	144
From learning to teaching	147
Further reading	155

Pause for thought 156

7 Aims, goals and objectives	158
Aims, goals and objectives in adult learning programmes	158
Levels of goals	163
Setting the goals	170
Widening the goals	180
Further reading	185

8 The adult learning group	186
The importance of groups in adult learning programmes	186
The nature of groups	188
Groups in adult education	195
Forming the group	200
The teacher and the group	201
Facing some problems in an adult learning group	205
Further reading	214

9 Roles and the teacher	215
Roles in adult learning groups	215
The roles of the teacher of adults	219
Resistance to change	231
Further reading	235

10 Teaching: content and methods	236
Curriculum	236
The relationship between content and methods	241
Content	243
Methods	252
Teaching – choosing content and methods	258
Further reading	262

Pause for more thought	263
11 Blocks to learning	264
Identifying the problem	264
Pre-existing knowledge	268
Self-perception factors	272
Some sources of emotional difficulty	277
Learning attitudes	281
Further reading	283
12 Evaluation	284
The importance of evaluation	285
Evaluate what?	293
How to evaluate	299
Practices	305
Teacher self-evaluation	306
The wider significance of evaluation	306
Further reading	307
13 Participation	308
Participation as involvement in the process (active learning)	308
Participation as increasing control over the process	314
Participation as presence in teaching-learning programmes	319
The invisible teacher of adults	322
Further reading	323
 Conclusion	324
Bibliography	327
Author index	340
Subject index	343