

CHAPTER I	Introduction
	Willem van Boom and Marco Loos	3
CHAPTER 2	Collective private enforcement of consumer law: the key questions
	Hans-W. Micklitz
I	Expansion of collective redress in Germany	13
I.1	Action for injunction, Sammelklage , skimming off procedure, model lawsuit under the investors' protection laws	13
I.2	Deficiencies of the KapMuG	16
I.3	Thoughts on the future form of group actions	16
2	Justification of group actions	17
2.1	Procedural economy	17
2.2	Justice	17
2.3	Regulatory functions of group actions	18
3	Position and function of the group action within the collective legal protection	18
3.1	Group action and skimming-off lawsuits	18
3.2	The long shadow of the American class-action	18
3.3	Group action and model lawsuits	19
3.4	Coping with mass damages	19
4	Questions of principle pertaining to group actions	20
4.1	Opt-in or opt-out?	20
4.2	The appropriate group representative	21
4.2.1	The chosen group representative	21
4.2.2	'First come, first serve'	21
4.2.3	Group representatives appointed by the court	22
4.2.4	Requirements as to the suitability of the group action plaintiff	22
4.3	Associations as group representatives?	23
4.4	The 'managing judge'	24
4.5	The lawyer-entrepreneur	25
5	The objective of the group action	25
5.1	Affirmative action	26
5.2	Action for performance	26
5.3	Order of priority of affirmative action and action for performance	27
5.4	Settlement in court	28
6	Procedural requirements	28
6.1	Ensuring a homogeneous group of plaintiffs	28
6.2	Commencement of the procedure	29

6.3	The group members' position and information during the process	30
6.4	Continuation of the proceedings subsequent to successful affirmative action	30
7	Binding effect	31
7.1	Binding effect of settlements and decisions	31
7.2	The effect of pending group action lawsuits	31
8	Instances, appeal and fees	32
8.1	Instances and appeal	32
8.2	Court and lawyer fees	32
9	Association and group action lawsuits in Community law	33
CHAPTER 3	Public and private transnational enforcement of EU consumer law Gerrit Betlem
	Summary	37
I	Introduction	37
2	Regulation on Consumer Protection Cooperation	39
2.1	Network of watchdogs	39
2.2	Cross-Border breach	41
2.3	Who are the watchdogs?	44
2.4	Powers	45
2.5	Which courts?	48
2.6	Payments for non-compliance	50
2.7	Protecting foreign consumers	51
2.7.1	Territorial scope of protection	51
2.7.2	Alpine Investments	52
3	The 1998 Consumer Injunctions Directive	54
3.1	Envisaged enforcers	54
3.2	Scope and protected interests	55
4	Covered transnational enforcement scenarios	59
5	The 2005 Unfair Commercial Practices Directive	60
6	A Lingua franca?	61
7	Conclusions	62
CHAPTER 4	Enforcing consumer interests by regulatory agencies – the British experience; A case study of the Office of Fair Trading Geraint Howells
I	Introduction	65
2	Regulators	66
2.1	Central government	66

CONTENTS

2.2	Local authorities	66
2.3	Sectoral regulators	68
3	OFT	69
3.1	Background	69
3.2	Licensor – consumer credit	70
3.3	General regulator	73
3.3.1	Part II Fair Trading Act 1973	73
3.3.2	Codes of Practice	73
3.3.3	Unfair terms	74
3.3.4	Rogue traders	75
3.3.5	Part 8 Enterprise Act 2002	75
4	Conclusions	77
4.1	General approach to enforcement	77
4.2	Going all the way to court	78
4.3	Organisation	79
4.4	Final remarks	80
CHAPTER 5	Enforcement of consumers' collective interests by regulatory agencies in the Nordic countries Klaus Viitanen
I	Introduction	83
2	Supervision of marketing and standard contract terms	85
2.1	The Nordic Consumer Ombudsmen	85
2.1.1	General	85
2.1.2	Preventive measures	85
2.1.3	Repressive actions	87
2.2	The Nordic Market Courts	87
2.2.1	General	87
2.2.2	Right of action	88
2.2.3	Sanctions	89
2.2.4	Criminal sanctions	90
2.2.5	Compensation of damages	90
2.2.6	Right to appeal	90
2.2.7	Legal expenses	91
3	Collective actions for compensation	91
3.1	General	91
3.2	Nordic group actions for compensation	94
3.3	The question of legal expenses	96
3.4	Group complaints in the Public Consumer Complaint Board	98
4	The Nordic enforcement system: a success story or something else?	99
4.1	Supervision of marketing and contract terms	99
4.2	Group action for compensation	101

CHAPTER 6	The Dutch Consumer Authority: an introduction Sjoerd Ammerlaan and Dirk Janssen
I	Why the Consumer Authority?	107
I.1	Cabinet policy – strategic action programme for consumer policy	107
I.2	Regulation 2006/2004	108
2	Consumer Protection Enforcement Act	109
3	Basic principles for the Consumer Authority's work	110
3.1	Positioning	110
3.2	Mission, tasks and objectives	110
3.3	What will the Consumer authority be supervising?	111
3.4	Collective consumer interests	112
3.5	Supervisory powers	113
3.6	Powers of enforcement	113
3.6.1	Powers of enforcement under civil law	114
3.6.2	Powers of enforcement under administrative law	114
3.6.3	Disclosure	115
3.6.4	Class settlement	115
3.7	Prioritisation	116
4	Cooperation	117
4.1	Relationship with existing 'private sector initiatives'	117
4.1.1	The SRC	118
4.1.2	Consumer organisations	118
4.1.3	Social consultation	119
4.2	Relationship with other supervisory authorities	119
5	Conclusion	121
CHAPTER 7	Enforcement of collective consumer interests: a competition law perspective Kati J. Csere
I	Introduction	125
2	A preliminary remark	127
3	The barriers to consumer redress	129
4	The objectives of consumer redress	130
5	The impact of the consumer redress on business and competition	131
6	Enforcement of consumer interests through EC competition rules	132
7	A new framework of competition law enforcement	133
8	Public enforcement of consumer interests	133
9	Private enforcement of competition law: compensation for indirect purchasers	137

10	Barriers of bringing damages claims by consumers	140
11	Indirect purchasers' standing and passing on defence	140
12	Access to evidence	146
13	Burden of proof and damages calculation	149
14	Costs	150
15	Motor car insurance saga: the limitations of actions at EC level	152
16	How to empower consumers to make effective use of their procedural rights?	156
17	Enforcement of collective consumer interests on the basis of consumer law	160
18	Conclusions: the comparative advantage of collective consumer actions	172

CHAPTER 8      Should consumer protection law be publicly enforced?
An economic perspective on EC Regulation 2006/2004
and its implementation in the consumer protection laws of the Member States
Roger van den Bergh

1	Introduction	179
2	Economic criteria for allocating enforcement powers to public authorities	182
2.1	Information advantages of public authorities	183
2.2	The social benefits of enforcement deviate from the private benefits	184
2.3	Economic reasons for public enforcement of consumer protection laws	185
2.3.1	Consumers have no information about law infringements	185
2.3.2	The private benefits of individual consumers differ from the social benefits	187
3	Public enforcement of consumer protection laws in EC Member States: an economic assessment	190
3.1	The need for public enforcement: deterrence	191
3.2	An agenda of priorities for public enforcement agencies	193
3.3	Sanctions and timing of the intervention	195
3.3.1	Choice of sanctions	196
3.3.2	Timing of the intervention	200
3.4	The role of private enforcement	201
4	Conclusions	202

CHAPTER 9	Collectivism: Evaluating the effectiveness of public and private models for regulating consumer protection Christopher Hodges
I	Policy considerations	207
2	Evaluations	212
2.1	Oppositions	212
2.2	Consumers and business	213
2.3	Application of the ‘responsive regulation’ best practice	218
2.4	Excessive litigation?	219
2.5	Summary	221
3	Some alternatives	222
3.1	Regulation	222
3.1.1	Efficient Regulatory Agencies	222
3.1.2	Self-regulation	223
3.2	Compensation	224
3.2.1	Class actions	225
3.2.2	ADR	226
3.2.3	Compensation schemes	227
4	Conclusions	227
CHAPTER 10	Effective enforcement of consumer law in Europe; Private, public, and collective mechanisms Willem van Boom and Marco Loos
	Abstract	231
I	Introduction	231
2	A short summary of the contributions	232
3	Why collective action is needed	235
4	Private law instruments filling the enforcement gap	238
5	Compensation of mass consumer damage	239
6	Self-regulation and public supervision: two ends of the spectrum?	242
7	Injunctive relief by collective private action	245
8	Bundling actions for trifle loss?	249
9	Mixed instruments: private and public enforcement	250
10	Concluding remarks: On the way to creating (slightly less im)perfect markets	253