

---

Table of Contents

|  |          |
|--|----------|
| Preface   | v        |
| About the Authors   | ix       |
| Part OneGeneral Report   |          |
| Chapter 1: General Report on History and Taxation:The Dialectical Relationship between Taxationand the Political Balance of Power                         | 3 |
| Peter Essers  |          |
| 1.1. Starting point and goal of the research   | 3        |
| 1.2. Methodology   | 4        |
| 1.3. Test results of the hypothesis on the dialecticalrelationship between taxation and the political balanceof power in the investigated states: Thematic reports | 6        |
| 1.3.1. “No Taxation without Representation”: The Relationshipbetween Taxes and Revolutions   | 6        |
| 1.3.2. Tax Policy of Nazi Germany  | 7        |
| 1.3.3. Tax Systems of the Former Communist States in Europe  | 8        |
| 1.3.4. Fiscal Federalism and “No Taxation withoutRepresentation”: The Historic Dimension   | 8        |
| 1.3.5. Fiscal Challenges to Democracy  | 9        |
| 1.3.6. No Vote, No Tax! Taxation and Women’s SuffrageMovements   | 9        |
| 1.3.7. EU Taxes and “No Taxation without Representation”   | 10       |
| 1.4. Results of the hypothesis tested in the national reports  | 11       |
| 1.4.1. Introduction  | 11       |
| 1.4.2. National reports that describe a dialectical relationshipbetween taxes and revolutions  | 12       |
| 1.4.3. National reports that show a gradual developmenttowards “no taxation without representation” incombination with the rise and functioning ofdemocracies  | 17       |
| 1.4.4. Taxes potentially conflicting with democracy  | 21       |

Table of Contents

---

|                   |   |           |
|-------------------|---|-----------|
| 1.5.              | The dialectical relationship between the repressive taxes of dictators and the balance of power                             | 24        |
| 1.5.1.            | Introduction  | 24        |
| 1.5.2.            | Repressive taxes in the national reports  | 27        |
| 1.5.2.1.          | National Socialist tax regimes  | 27        |
| 1.5.2.2.          | Communist tax regimes   | 31        |
| 1.6.              | General conclusions   | 35        |
|               |   |           |
| Part Two          |   |           |
| Thematic Reports  |   |           |
| Chapter 2: | “No Taxation without Representation”:The Relationship between Taxes and RevolutionsChantal Stebbings | 41 |
| 2.1.              | Introduction  | 41        |
| 2.2.              | The universality of tax   | 42        |
| 2.3.              | Tax as a factor in revolutions  | 44        |
| 2.4.              | Taxation and representation   | 50        |
| 2.5.              | Conclusion  | 56        |
| Chapter 3: | Tax Policy of Nazi GermanyChristine Osterloh-Konrad   | 59 |
| 3.1.              | Introduction  | 59        |
| 3.2.              | Pursuing non-budgetary goals via taxes  | 59        |
| 3.3.              | Discriminating via taxes  | 61        |
| 3.3.1.            | Discriminatory interpretation of tax law  | 61        |
| 3.3.2.            | Discriminatory enforcement of tax rules   | 64        |
| 3.3.3.            | Overt discrimination by tax rules   | 64        |
| 3.4.              | Nazi tax policy in the occupied territories   | 65        |
| 3.5.              | Conclusion  | 68        |

|                   |   |            |
|-------------------|---|------------|
| Chapter 4: | Tax Systems of Former Communist States in Europe                                   | 69  |
|                   | Ziemowit Kukulski and Małgorzata Sęk   |            |
| 4.1.              | Introduction  | 69         |
| 4.2.              | Common features of communist tax systems  | 70         |
| 4.3.              | Conclusion  | 73         |
| Chapter 5: | Fiscal Federalism and “No Taxation without Representation”: The Historic Dimension | 75  |
|                   | Bruno Peeters and Rik Smet   |            |
| 5.1.              | Introduction  | 75         |
| 5.2.              | Classification of (con)federal state structures   | 79         |
| 5.3.              | Centrifugal (fiscal) federalism   | 83         |
| 5.3.1.            | Introduction  | 83         |
| 5.3.2.            | Symmetrical fiscal federalism   | 85         |
| 5.3.3.            | Asymmetrical fiscal federalism  | 85         |
| 5.3.4.            | Ongoing reforms   | 88         |
| 5.4.              | Centripetal (fiscal) federalism   | 88         |
| 5.5.              | Fiscal decentralization or devolution in more unitary states                              | 94         |
| 5.6.              | Conclusion  | 96         |
| Chapter 6: | Fiscal Challenges to Democracy   | 101 |
|                   | Wolfgang Schön   |            |
| 6.1.              | Prologue: No representation without taxation?   | 101        |
| 6.2.              | The principle of “congruence” and its challenges  | 102        |
| 6.2.1.            | The meaning of “congruence”   | 102        |
| 6.2.2.            | Challenges to “congruence”  | 103        |
| 6.2.2.1.          | Monarchs and peoples  | 103        |
| 6.2.2.2.          | Majorities and minorities   | 103        |
| 6.2.2.3.          | Regions and colonies  | 104        |

Table of Contents

---

|                   |  |     |
|-------------------|--|-----|
| 6.2.3.            | Congruence under stress                                      | 104 |
| 6.2.3.1.          | Monarch versus people  | 105 |
| 6.2.3.2.          | Census suffrage versus universal suffrage                    | 107 |
| 6.2.3.2.1.        | Taxpayers and voters   | 107 |
| 6.2.3.2.2.        | Census suffrage  | 108 |
| 6.2.3.2.3.        | Universal suffrage   | 110 |
| 6.3.              | Protecting minorities  | 112 |
| 6.3.1.            | Counter-majoritarian rules?                                  | 112 |
| 6.3.2.            | Allocation of fiscal competences                             | 113 |
| 6.3.3.            | Procedural constraints: Veto players andsupermajorities  | 114 |
| 6.3.4.            | Material limits to tax legislation                           | 116 |
| 6.4.              | Containing pressure groups                                   | 119 |
| 6.5.              | External conflicts   | 121 |
| 6.5.1.            | Colonial situations  | 121 |
| 6.5.2.            | EU fiscal discipline   | 123 |
| 6.5.3.            | Conclusion   | 125 |
| Chapter 7: | No Vote, No Tax!                                      |     |
|                   | Taxation and Women's Suffrage Movements               | 127 |
|                   | Sigrid Hemels   |     |
| 7.1.              | Introduction   | 127 |
| 7.2.              | Background: Legal position of women                          | 127 |
| 7.3.              | John Stuart Mill   | 128 |
| 7.4.              | Position of married women in tax law                         | 128 |
| 7.5.              | No vote, no tax in the United Kingdom                        | 129 |
| 7.6.              | "No taxation without representation" in theUnited States | 130 |
| 7.7.              | Not on the continent?  | 133 |
| 7.8.              | Conclusion   | 134 |

|                   |  |            |
|-------------------|--|------------|
| Chapter 8: | EU Taxes and “No Taxation without Representation”                       | 135 |
|                   | Gianluigi Bizioli   |            |
| 8.1.              | The approach of the analysis   | 135        |
| 8.2.              | Three standards for the measuring of democracy                                 | 136        |
| 8.3.              | Taxation without representation?   | 138        |
| 8.4.              | The rule-of-law standard   | 141        |
| 8.5.              | Which demos ?   | 142        |
| 8.6.              | Conclusion   | 143        |
| Part Three        |  |            |
| National Reports  |  |            |
| Chapter 9: | Austria   | 147 |
|                   | Johannes Heinrich and Michaela Pitzer                                   |            |
| 9.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Austria                                     | 147        |
| 9.1.1.            | From 1938 until today  | 147        |
| 9.1.2.            | The period of the 1st Republic and the Ständestaat (1918-1938)          | 148        |
| 9.1.3.            | Taxes in the Habsburg Empire from the middle of the 18th century to its ending | 149        |
| 9.1.3.1.          | Preliminary remarks  | 149        |
| 9.1.3.2.          | Real estate tax  | 150        |
| 9.1.3.3.          | Trade tax  | 152        |
| 9.1.3.4.          | Building tax   | 153        |
| 9.1.3.5.          | Income tax   | 154        |
| 9.1.3.6.          | Personal Tax Act of 1896 ( Personalsteuergesetz 1896)                   | 155        |
| 9.1.3.7.          | Excise taxes   | 157        |
| 9.1.3.8.          | Stamp and Tax Act  | 158        |
| 9.1.3.9.          | Tariffs  | 158        |
| 9.1.4.            | Tax revenue at the beginning of the 20th century                               | 158        |
| 9.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 161        |

Table of Contents

---

|                    |  |            |
|--------------------|--|------------|
| 9.3.               | Taxes supporting democracy and those potentially in conflict with democracy                    | 163        |
| 9.3.1.             | Census suffrage  | 163        |
| 9.3.2.             | Elements of popular participation in the collection of taxes                                   | 166        |
| 9.3.3.             | Emancipation of (married) women  | 169        |
| 9.3.4.             | Equal treatment of income  | 171        |
| 9.4.               | Conclusion   | 172        |
| Chapter 10: | Belgium   | 175 |
|                    | Pieter de Reu and Kim van de Velden   |            |
| 10.1.              | A brief history of Belgian taxation  | 175        |
| 10.1.1.            | Introduction   | 175        |
| 10.1.2.            | 1830-1919  | 175        |
| 10.1.3.            | 1919-present   | 177        |
| 10.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 178        |
| 10.2.1.            | World War I: A new taxation culture  | 178        |
| 10.2.2.            | World War II   | 179        |
| 10.2.3.            | Repressive taxes that contributed significantly to rebellion and revolution against the regime | 180        |
| 10.2.3.1.          | Taxation protest during the 1830 Belgian Secession   | 180        |
| 10.2.3.2.          | Death duty taxation as a stumbling block (1851)  | 181        |
| 10.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with it                           | 183        |
| 10.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy   | 183        |
| 10.3.1.1.          | The example of the Parent-Subsidiary Directive   | 184        |
| 10.3.1.2.          | The introduction of personal income taxes  | 185        |
| 10.3.1.2.1.        | Scheduled taxes and additional global personal income tax                                      | 185        |
| 10.3.1.2.2.        | The income tax reform of 1962  | 186        |
| 10.3.1.3.          | The effects of the introduction of progressive taxation  | 187        |
| 10.3.1.3.1.        | The emancipation of (married) women  | 187        |
| 10.3.1.3.2.        | The equal treatment of income (from capital and from labour)                                   | 188        |
| 10.3.1.3.3.        | Income taxation stimuli for the ownership of dwellings   | 190        |
| 10.3.1.4.          | Fiscal federalism  | 190        |
| 10.3.2.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy   | 192        |

|                    |  |     |
|--------------------|--|-----|
| 10.3.2.1.          | EU taxes in relation to “no taxation without representation”   | 192 |
| 10.4.              | Conclusion   | 193 |
| Chapter 11: | Croatia   | 195 |
|                    | Hrvoje Arbutina, Nataša Žunić Kovačević and Stjepan Gadzo   |     |
| 11.1.              | Introduction   | 195 |
| 11.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 199 |
| 11.2.1.            | Taxation in national-socialist and fascist regimes: The “Independent State of Croatia”   | 199 |
| 11.2.2.            | Taxation in communist regimes: “The Second Yugoslavia”   | 201 |
| 11.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy   | 205 |
| 11.3.1.            | Personal income tax  | 205 |
| 11.3.2.            | Fiscal federalism  | 209 |
| 11.4.              | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”)   | 213 |
| 11.4.1.            | Taxes introduced as a consequence of the financial crisis in countries that were under the severe control of the “Troika” (the IMF, European Commission and European Central Bank) | 213 |
| 11.4.2.            | EU-related taxes in relation to “no taxation without representation”   | 217 |
| 11.4.3.            | Other taxes potentially in conflict with “no taxation without representation”  | 218 |
| 11.5.              | Conclusion   | 219 |
| Chapter 12: | Czech Republic  | 221 |
|                    | Michal Radvan, Petra Hrubá Smržová (Jánošíková) and Radim Boháč   |     |
| 12.1.              | Introduction to the history of taxation in the Czech Republic  | 221 |

Table of Contents

---

|                    |   |     |
|--------------------|---|-----|
| 12.2.              | Repressive taxes  | 224 |
| 12.2.1.            | Taxation in national-socialist and fascist regimes(the Protectorate of Bohemia and Moravia,1939-1945)                     | 224 |
| 12.2.2.            | Taxation in communist regimes   | 226 |
| 12.2.3.            | Other repressive taxes  | 232 |
| 12.2.4.            | Repressive taxes that contributed significantly torebellion and revolution against the regime                                 | 233 |
| 12.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially inconflict with democracy  | 234 |
| 12.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy  | 234 |
| 12.3.2.            | Fiscal federalism   | 236 |
| 12.3.3.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy  | 238 |
| 12.3.3.1.          | Taxes introduced as a consequence of the financialcrisis of 2008 in countries that were under severecontrol of the troika | 238 |
| 12.3.3.2.          | EU-related taxes in relation to “no taxation withoutrepresentation”   | 238 |
| 12.3.3.3.          | Other taxes potentially in conflict with “no taxationwithout representation”  | 239 |
| 12.4.              | Conclusion  | 240 |
| Chapter 13: | Denmark  | 243 |
|                    | Jacob Graff Nielsen, Peter Koerver Schmidt andHelle Vogt  |     |
| 13.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Denmark  | 243 |
| 13.2.              | Repressive taxes  | 248 |
| 13.2.1.            | Danish taxation and the World Wars  | 248 |
| 13.2.2.            | Repressive taxes contributing to rebellion andrevolution  | 249 |
| 13.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentiallyin conflict with democracy  | 250 |
| 13.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy  | 250 |
| 13.3.1.1.          | Introduction of personal income taxes related tothe emancipation of citizens  | 250 |
| 13.3.1.1.1.        | The long run-up to the introduction of personalincome taxes   | 250 |

|                    |   |     |
|--------------------|---|-----|
| 13.3.1.1.2.        | Universal suffrage and taxation   | 253 |
| 13.3.1.1.3.        | The emancipation of women and taxation                                      | 254 |
| 13.3.1.1.4.        | The effects of the introduction of personal income taxes                    | 257 |
| 13.3.1.1.5.        | The equal treatment of income (from capital and labour)                     | 260 |
| 13.3.1.2.          | Fiscal federalism   | 261 |
| 13.3.2.            | Discussions concerning Denmark's membership of the European Union           | 261 |
| 13.4.              | Conclusion  | 262 |
| Chapter 14: | Finland  | 263 |
|                    | Leila Juanto and Esko Linnakangas                                    |     |
| 14.1.              | Introduction to Finnish tax history   | 263 |
| 14.2.              | Repressive taxes  | 265 |
| 14.2.1.            | National Socialism and fascism in Finland                                   | 265 |
| 14.2.2.            | Communism in Finland  | 266 |
| 14.2.3.            | Other types of repressive taxes in Finland                                  | 267 |
| 14.3.              | Tax legislation   | 267 |
| 14.4.              | Democracy and taxes   | 269 |
| 14.4.1.            | Development of the income tax system  | 269 |
| 14.4.1.1.          | The relationship between the payment of taxes and the right to vote         | 269 |
| 14.4.1.2.          | Redistribution of income, progressive taxation and social tax deductions    | 269 |
| 14.4.1.3.          | Neoliberalism, broadening of the tax base and direct subsidies and flat tax | 270 |
| 14.4.1.4.          | The role of women in taxation   | 271 |
| 14.4.1.5.          | Abolition of wealth tax   | 272 |
| 14.4.1.6.          | Favouring owner-occupied housing  | 272 |
| 14.4.1.7.          | Tax treatment of labour market organizations and their membership fees      | 272 |
| 14.4.2.            | Distribution of taxes nationally and supranationally                        | 273 |
| 14.4.2.1.          | Municipalities and counties   | 273 |
| 14.4.2.2.          | European Union  | 274 |
| 14.4.3.            | Anti-democratic taxation  | 274 |
| 14.4.3.1.          | Taxes resulting from financial crisis                                       | 274 |

Table of Contents

---

|                    |   |            |
|--------------------|---|------------|
| 14.4.3.2.          | EU taxes  | 274        |
| 14.5.              | Conclusion  | 275        |
| Chapter 15: | France   | 277 |
|                    | Emmanuel de Crouy-Chanel   |            |
| 15.1.              | Introduction  | 277        |
| 15.2.              | Introduction to the tax history of France   | 277        |
| 15.2.1.            | Taxation and the modern sovereign state   | 278        |
| 15.2.2.            | Taxation and nation   | 279        |
| 15.2.3.            | Taxation and the Republic   | 282        |
| 15.3.              | Repressive taxes  | 284        |
| 15.3.1.            | Taxation in national-socialist and fascist regimes  | 284        |
| 15.3.2.            | Other repressive taxes  | 287        |
| 15.3.2.1.          | Foreign repressive taxation applied in France   | 287        |
| 15.3.2.2.          | Colonial taxation   | 288        |
| 15.3.3.            | (Repressive) taxes that contributed significantly to rebellion and revolution against the regime (often caused by the violation of the principle of “no taxation without representation”) | 289        |
| 15.4.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”)                                       | 290        |
| 15.4.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy  | 290        |
| 15.4.1.1.          | Introduction of personal income tax   | 290        |
| 15.4.1.2.          | Fiscal federalism   | 291        |
| 15.4.2.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”)  | 292        |
| 15.4.2.1.          | EU-related taxes in relation to “no taxation without representation”  | 292        |
| 15.4.2.2.          | Other taxes potentially in conflict with “no taxation without representation”   | 293        |
| 15.5.              | Conclusion  | 293        |

|   |            |
|---|------------|
| Chapter 16: Germany  | 303 |
| Christine Osterloh-Konrad and Korinna Schönhärl  |            |
| 16.1. Introduction to German tax history  | 303        |
| 16.2. Repressive taxes  | 304        |
| 16.2.1. Repressive or confiscatory taxes  | 304        |
| 16.2.1.1. Taxation under the National Socialist regime (1933-1945)  | 305        |
| 16.2.1.2. Taxation in the German Democratic Republic  | 308        |
| 16.2.2. Repressive taxes that have contributed significantly to rebellion and revolution against the regime | 311        |
| 16.2.2.1. Rare examples of open tax resistance in Germany   | 311        |
| 16.2.2.2. Judicial review and tax resistance  | 313        |
| 16.3. Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy                           | 313        |
| 16.3.1. Taxes supporting democracy  | 314        |
| 16.3.1.1. Introduction of personal income taxes related to the emancipation of citizens                     | 314        |
| 16.3.1.1.1. Prussian nobles' resistance against tax law modernization in the 19th century                   | 314        |
| 16.3.1.1.2. Direct property taxes in southern Germany in the 19th century                                   | 316        |
| 16.3.1.1.3. Miquel's tax reform of 1891: The introduction of the income tax in Prussia                      | 317        |
| 16.3.1.1.4. The Erzberger reforms during the Weimar republic: Towards a modern tax system                   | 318        |
| 16.3.1.1.5. Conclusions   | 320        |
| 16.3.1.2. Fiscal federalism   | 320        |
| 16.3.1.2.1. Fiscal federalism in the German Empire  | 320        |
| 16.3.1.2.2. Fiscal federalism between 1919 and 1945   | 321        |
| 16.3.1.2.3. Fiscal federalism after World War II  | 321        |
| 16.3.1.2.4. Conclusion  | 322        |
| 16.3.2. Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy  | 323        |
| 16.3.2.1. EU-related taxes  | 323        |
| 16.3.2.2. Other taxes potentially in conflict with "no taxation without representation"                     | 323        |
| 16.3.2.2.1. Taxes during the occupation by the Allied forces after World War II                             | 323        |

Table of Contents

---

|                    |  |            |
|--------------------|--|------------|
| 16.3.2.2.2.        | Influences of international tax competition on domestic tax law  | 324        |
| 16.4.              | Conclusion   | 325        |
| Chapter 17: | Greece  | 327 |
|                    | Petros Pantazopoulos  |            |
| 17.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Greece  | 327        |
| 17.1.1.            | The 1821 Revolution and the emergence of the modern Greek state  | 327        |
| 17.1.2.            | The tax system during the period of Ottoman rule   | 327        |
| 17.1.3.            | The constitutional enshrinement of rules regarding the operation of the state  | 328        |
| 17.1.4.            | Enshrinement of constitutional rules to regulate taxation  | 329        |
| 17.1.5.            | Developments in the Greek tax system   | 330        |
| 17.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 332        |
| 17.2.1.            | Taxation in national socialist and fascist regimes   | 332        |
| 17.2.1.1.          | The Metaxas regime   | 332        |
| 17.2.1.2.          | The German occupation  | 334        |
| 17.2.2.            | The Colonels' Junta (1967-1974)  | 336        |
| 17.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy  | 339        |
| 17.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy   | 339        |
| 17.3.1.1.          | Introduction of personal income taxes related to the emancipation of citizens  | 339        |
| 17.3.1.1.1.        | The introduction of personal income tax in Greece  | 339        |
| 17.3.1.1.2.        | The relationship between women as taxable persons for income tax purposes and the granting of voting rights          | 340        |
| 17.3.1.1.3.        | The impact of the introduction of income tax on the redistribution of income   | 341        |
| 17.3.1.1.4.        | The position of women in the tax system  | 342        |
| 17.3.1.1.5.        | The tax system's effect on the acquisition of real estate property   | 344        |
| 17.3.1.2.          | Fiscal federalism  | 345        |
| 17.3.2.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of "no taxation without representation") | 345        |

|                    |   |     |
|--------------------|---|-----|
| 17.3.2.1.          | Taxes introduced as a consequence of the financial crisis in countries that were under the severe control of the troika | 345 |
| 17.3.2.1.1.        | Greece's placement under the supervision of the troika  | 345 |
| 17.3.2.2.          | EU taxes relating to "no taxation without representation"   | 347 |
| 17.4.              | Conclusion  | 348 |
| Chapter 18: | Hungary  | 349 |
|                    | István Simon   |     |
| 18.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Hungary  | 349 |
| 18.1.1.            | Political milestones  | 349 |
| 18.1.2.            | A short history of taxation   | 351 |
| 18.2.              | Repressive taxes  | 354 |
| 18.2.1.            | Preliminary considerations in respect of repressive taxation  | 354 |
| 18.2.2.            | The interwar period and World War II  | 354 |
| 18.2.3.            | The communist era in Hungary  | 356 |
| 18.2.4.            | Other repressive taxes  | 363 |
| 18.2.5.            | Taxes, confiscations in the Habsburg era and the Trianon Treaty   | 364 |
| 18.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy   | 365 |
| 18.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy  | 365 |
| 18.3.2.            | Introduction of the personal income tax   | 365 |
| 18.3.3.            | Tax reform in 2010 – flat tax can support democracy in the given conditions   | 366 |
| 18.3.4.            | Social security   | 369 |
| 18.3.5.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy – partly avoided   | 370 |
| 18.4.              | Conclusion  | 371 |

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| Chapter 19: Ireland   | 373 |
| Emer Hunt, Peter Clarke and Gerardine Doyle   |            |
| 19.1. Historical development of the Irish taxation system  | 373        |
| 19.1.1. Introduction   | 373        |
| 19.1.2. The Irish taxation system before the Napoleonic Wars   | 375        |
| 19.1.3. The introduction of income tax in Ireland  | 376        |
| 19.1.4. Tax developments in the Irish Free State (1922 onwards)  | 379        |
| 19.2. Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”)                          | 382        |
| 19.2.1. Introduction   | 382        |
| 19.2.2. Taxes supporting democracy   | 384        |
| 19.2.2.1. Introduction of personal income taxes related to emancipation of citizens  | 387        |
| 19.2.2.1.1. Taxation of women  | 387        |
| 19.2.2.1.2. Taxation of wealth and capital   | 389        |
| 19.2.2.2. Fiscal federalism  | 390        |
| 19.2.3. Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”)   | 390        |
| 19.2.3.1. Introduction   | 390        |
| 19.2.3.2. Taxes introduced as a consequence of the financial crisis in countries that were under severe control of the troika (IMF, European Commission and European Central Bank) | 391        |
| 19.2.3.3. EU-related taxes in relationship to “no taxation without representation”   | 393        |
| 19.2.3.4. Other taxes potentially in conflict with “no taxation without representation”  | 394        |
| 19.3. Conclusion   | 395        |
| Chapter 20: Italy   | 397 |
| Maria Cecilia Fregni  |            |
| 20.1. Introduction to Italy’s tax history  | 397        |
| 20.2. Repressive taxes: Taxation in a fascist regime   | 399        |

|                    |  |     |
|--------------------|--|-----|
| 20.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy   | 407 |
| 20.3.1.            | Introduction of IRPEF  | 407 |
| 20.3.2.            | Fiscal federalism  | 409 |
| 20.4.              | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy:EU-related taxes in relation to “no taxation withoutrepresentation”   | 415 |
| 20.5.              | Conclusion   | 417 |
| Chapter 21: | Japan   | 419 |
|                    | Yuri Matsubara  |     |
| 21.1.              | Introduction to the tax history  | 419 |
| 21.1.1.            | Ancient period and Middle Ages (7th century-15th century)  | 419 |
| 21.1.2.            | Early modern period (1573-1868)  | 421 |
| 21.1.2.1.          | Land surveying   | 421 |
| 21.1.2.2.          | Other taxes: History of miscellaneous taxes(including enterprise tax) in the Middle Ages   | 422 |
| 21.1.3.            | Land and tax reform under the Meiji Restoration(1867-1881)   | 423 |
| 21.1.3.1.          | Overview   | 423 |
| 21.1.3.2.          | Other taxes: History of enterprise (profit) tax inthe modern era (1868-1949)   | 424 |
| 21.1.4.            | The process of enacting the Imperial Constitution(1871-1890) and tax provisions/statutes   | 426 |
| 21.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 429 |
| 21.2.1.            | Repressive taxes (predominantly meant to maintainand increase the power of the regime, suppressenemies of the regime and prevent unwanted socialreforms)                             | 429 |
| 21.2.1.1.          | Taxation in National Socialist and fascist regimes(1919-1945)  | 429 |
| 21.2.2.            | Repressive taxes that contributed significantly torebellion and revolution against the regime (oftencaused by the violation of the principle of “notaxation without representation”) | 432 |

Table of Contents

---

|                    |   |     |
|--------------------|---|-----|
| 21.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”) | 434 |
| 21.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy  | 434 |
| 21.3.1.1.          | Introduction of personal income taxes related to emancipation of citizens   | 434 |
| 21.3.1.2.          | Fiscal federalism   | 435 |
| 21.3.2.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”)                                | 435 |
| 21.3.3.            | Other taxes potentially in conflict with “no taxation without representation”   | 436 |
| 21.4.              | Conclusion  | 437 |
| Chapter 22: | Latvia   | 439 |
|                    | Janis Neimanis   |     |
| 22.1.              | Tax history of Latvia   | 439 |
| 22.1.1.            | Ancient territories of Latvia   | 439 |
| 22.1.2.            | 13th-16th centuries   | 440 |
| 22.1.3.            | 16th-17th centuries   | 441 |
| 22.1.4.            | 18th century  | 444 |
| 22.1.5.            | 19th century  | 444 |
| 22.1.6.            | World War I   | 448 |
| 22.1.7.            | Republic of Latvia (1918-1940)  | 449 |
| 22.1.7.1.          | Latvian Socialistic Soviet Republic   | 450 |
| 22.1.7.2.          | Internationally recognized Republic of Latvia (1920-1940)   | 451 |
| 22.1.8.            | Occupied Latvia (1940-1991)   | 453 |
| 22.1.8.1.          | First year of Soviet occupation   | 453 |
| 22.1.8.2.          | Occupation by Nazi Germany (1941-1945)  | 455 |
| 22.1.9.            | Post-war period: Soviet occupation (1944-1990)  | 456 |
| 22.1.10.           | After the restoration of independence   | 458 |
| 22.2.              | Non-democratic (dictatorial) taxes (overview)   | 467 |
| 22.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and the rule of law (overview)   | 468 |
| 22.4.              | Taxes threatening democracy and the rule of law (overview)  | 469 |

---

|                    |   |     |
|--------------------|---|-----|
| Chapter 23: | Netherlands  | 471 |
|                    | Onno Ydema, Sigrid Hemels and Sonja Dusarduijn   |     |
| 23.1.              | Introduction  | 471 |
| 23.2.              | The tenth penny of the Grand Duke of Alba   | 471 |
| 23.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy, the introduction of income taxes: The 1892/1893 Dutch tax reform of Nicolas Pierson | 476 |
| 23.4.              | Repressive taxes: Dutch tax law under the National Socialist regime (1940-1945)                                 | 479 |
| 23.4.1.            | Previously  | 480 |
| 23.4.2.            | The beginning   | 481 |
| 23.4.3.            | Some reforms exposed  | 481 |
| 23.4.4.            | Aims of reform  | 482 |
| 23.4.4.1.          | Substantial increase of tax proceeds  | 482 |
| 23.4.4.2.          | Integration of ideology   | 483 |
| 23.4.5.            | Concluding  | 484 |
| 23.5.              | Personal income taxes and the emancipation of citizens  | 485 |
| 23.5.1.            | Married women   | 485 |
| 23.5.2.            | Unmarried citizens  | 488 |
| 23.6.              | Conclusion  | 489 |
| Chapter 24: | Norway   | 491 |
|                    | Harald Espeli  |     |
| 24.1.              | From municipal independence to complete state control of direct taxation: Norwegian taxation history since 1814 | 491 |
| 24.1.1.            | Introduction  | 491 |
| 24.1.2.            | Repressive taxation during the German occupation and the Quisling regime (1940-1945)                            | 493 |
| 24.2.              | Tax protests and violations of the principle of “no taxation without representation”                            | 495 |

Table of Contents

---

|                    |   |            |
|--------------------|---|------------|
| 24.3.              | Introduction and development of income and wealth taxation  | 497        |
| 24.3.1.            | The first modern tax laws of 1882   | 498        |
| 24.3.2.            | The tax reforms of 1911 and 1921  | 499        |
| 24.3.3.            | A system of high nominal tax rates and new goals for tax policy (1940-1992)   | 501        |
| 24.3.4.            | 1992 tax reform   | 502        |
| 24.4.              | Taxation of married women   | 503        |
| 24.5.              | From equal taxation of tenants and owners of dwellings to massive tax advantages for the latter   | 505        |
| 24.6.              | Fiscal federalism   | 506        |
| 24.7.              | Resource rent taxation on waterfalls and petroleum extraction   | 506        |
| 24.8.              | Transparency of tax assessment, tax complaints and the rule of law  | 508        |
| 24.9.              | Conclusion  | 510        |
| Chapter 25: | Poland   | 513 |
|                    | Ziemowit Kukulski, Małgorzata Sęk,Michał Wilk and Edgar Drozdowski  |            |
| 25.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Poland   | 513        |
| 25.2.              | Repressive taxes  | 517        |
| 25.2.1.            | Taxation during the national-socialist regime   | 517        |
| 25.2.2.            | Taxation during the communist regime  | 518        |
| 25.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”) | 519        |
| 25.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy  | 519        |
| 25.3.1.1.          | The Second Polish Republic (1918-1939)  | 519        |
| 25.3.1.1.1.        | The unification of tax systems  | 519        |
| 25.3.1.1.2.        | Tax Ordinance   | 521        |
| 25.3.1.1.3.        | State income tax  | 522        |

|                    |  |     |
|--------------------|--|-----|
| 25.3.1.2.          | Transition from communism to democracy(The Third Republic)   | 524 |
| 25.3.2.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy(especially with the principle of “no taxationwithout representation”)             | 527 |
| 25.3.2.1.          | EU-related taxes in relationship to “no taxationwithout representation”  | 527 |
| 25.3.2.2.          | Other taxes potentially in conflict with “no taxationwithout representation”   | 529 |
| 25.4.              | Conclusion   | 529 |
| Chapter 26: | Portugal  | 531 |
|                    | Rita Calçada Pires and Marta Carmo  |     |
| 26.1.              | A first approach: Portuguese tax history andpolitical power  | 531 |
| 26.2.              | Key facts throughout Portuguese tax history  | 533 |
| 26.2.1.            | Repressive taxes before the 20th century   | 533 |
| 26.2.1.1.          | Taxes to maintain and increase power   | 533 |
| 26.2.1.2.          | Early discriminatory taxation: Jews, Muslimsand slaves   | 535 |
| 26.2.2.            | Taxation in the new state/Salazarist regime  | 536 |
| 26.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy: The contemporaryPortuguese tax system  | 538 |
| 26.3.1.            | Introduction of personal income taxes and otherreforms   | 538 |
| 26.3.2.            | Fiscal federalism  | 541 |
| 26.4.              | Potential clashes: Questioning some types ofcontemporary taxation instruments  | 542 |
| 26.4.1.            | Taxes introduced as a consequence of the financialcrisis and the troika Memorandum of Understanding                                | 542 |
| 26.4.2.            | Other contemporary contributions that present manydoubts: Economic sectorial financial contributionsand multiplication of fees | 546 |
| 26.4.3.            | Is there a “pop tax” movement in Portugal?   | 550 |
| 26.5.              | Main conclusions: What may tax history anticipate?   | 553 |

Table of Contents

---

|                    |  |            |
|--------------------|--|------------|
| Chapter 27: | Serbia  | 557 |
|                    | Dejan Popović and Svetislav V. Kostić   |            |
| 27.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Serbia  | 557        |
| 27.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 564        |
| 27.2.1.            | Taxation in national-socialist and fascist regimes   | 564        |
| 27.2.2.            | Taxation in communist regimes  | 567        |
| 27.2.3.            | Other repressive taxes   | 569        |
| 27.2.4.            | Repressive taxes that have contributed significantly to rebellion and revolution against the regime                  | 570        |
| 27.2.4.1.          | Mileta's rebellion   | 571        |
| 27.2.4.2.          | Cazin rebellion  | 572        |
| 27.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy  | 573        |
| 27.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy   | 573        |
| 27.3.1.1.          | Introduction of personal income taxes related to the emancipation of citizens  | 573        |
| 27.3.1.2.          | Fiscal federalism  | 577        |
| 27.3.2.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of "no taxation without representation") | 580        |
| 27.4.              | Conclusion   | 580        |
| Chapter 28: | Slovakia  | 583 |
|                    | Miroslav Štrkolec, Anna Vartašová and Jozef Sábo  |            |
| 28.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Slovakia  | 583        |
| 28.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 584        |
| 28.2.1.            | Taxation in national socialist and fascist regimes   | 584        |
| 28.2.2.            | Taxation in communist regimes  | 588        |
| 28.2.3.            | Repressive taxes that have contributed significantly to rebellion and revolution against the regime                  | 592        |
| 28.3.              | Taxes supporting and potentially in conflict with democracy  | 594        |
| 28.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy   | 594        |
| 28.3.1.1.          | Introduction of personal income tax related to the emancipation of citizens  | 594        |

|                    |  |     |
|--------------------|--|-----|
| 28.3.1.2.          | Fiscal federalism  | 598 |
| 28.3.2.            | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy(especially with the principle of “no taxationwithout representation”) | 602 |
| 28.3.2.1.          | EU-related taxes in relation to “no taxation withoutrepresentation” in Slovakia  | 602 |
| 28.3.2.2.          | Other taxes potentially in conflict with “no taxationwithout representation”   | 603 |
| 28.4.              | Conclusion   | 604 |
| Chapter 29: | Spain   | 607 |
|                    | Ricardo García Antón and César Martínez Sánchez   |     |
| 29.1.              | Introduction to Spanish tax history  | 607 |
| 29.2.              | Repressive taxes in Spain  | 611 |
| 29.2.1.            | Taxation in the regime led by General FranciscoFranco  | 611 |
| 29.2.2.            | Repressive taxes that have contributed significantlyto rebellion and revolution against the regime                     | 615 |
| 29.2.2.1.          | Revolt of the Comuneros (1520-1521)   | 615 |
| 29.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentiallyin conflict with democracy in the Post-Franco period(1977-2020)    | 618 |
| 29.3.1.            | The need for progressive taxes and wealthredistribution to ensure democracy  | 619 |
| 29.3.2.            | Decentralization indissolubly linked to Spanishdemocracy   | 622 |
| 29.3.3.            | Taxes threatening democracy  | 626 |
| 29.3.3.1.          | Threats on the revenue side  | 627 |
| 29.3.3.2.          | Threats on the expenditure side  | 628 |
| 29.4.              | Conclusion   | 630 |
| Chapter 30: | Sweden  | 633 |
|                    | Katarina Fast Lappalainen, Peter Melzand Mauro Zamboni   |     |
| 30.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Sweden  | 633 |
| 30.1.1.            | Introduction   | 633 |

Table of Contents

---

|           |   |     |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 30.1.2.   | The development of taxation and in particular the principle of “no taxation without representation”, 1319-1921  | 634 |
| 30.1.2.1. | The Liberty Letter of 1319 and the principle of consent   | 634 |
| 30.1.2.2. | Effective monitoring of the population for tax purposes (1520s to 1809)   | 635 |
| 30.1.2.3. | The Age of Liberty and the Constitution of 1809   | 637 |
| 30.1.3.   | Taxation, industrialization and democratization   | 639 |
| 30.1.4.   | Participation in tax legislation  | 640 |
| 30.2.     | Repressive taxes  | 641 |
| 30.2.1.   | General overview  | 641 |
| 30.2.1.1. | The Protestant Reformation  | 641 |
| 30.2.1.2. | Fiscal problems during the Swedish Empire   | 642 |
| 30.2.1.3. | Fjärdepartsräfssten   | 643 |
| 30.2.1.4. | The great reduction   | 644 |
| 30.2.1.5. | Conclusions   | 645 |
| 30.2.2.   | Repressive taxes that have contributed significantly to rebellion and revolution against the regime (often caused by the violation of the principle of “no taxation without representation”)                        | 645 |
| 30.2.2.1. | The Engelbrekt feud   | 646 |
| 30.2.2.2. | The Dacke feud  | 646 |
| 30.2.3.   | The estate tax debate   | 647 |
| 30.2.4.   | The Pomperipossa debate   | 648 |
| 30.2.5.   | The debate regarding employee investment funds  | 649 |
| 30.2.6.   | The one-off property tax debate   | 650 |
| 30.3.     | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”)   | 651 |
| 30.3.1.   | Taxes supporting democracy  | 651 |
| 30.3.1.1. | Introduction of personal income taxes related to the emancipation of citizens (relationship with, e.g., abolishment of census suffrage, taxation of rich versus poor, man versus woman, capitalists versus workers) | 651 |
| 30.3.1.2. | Fiscal federalism   | 652 |
| 30.3.2.   | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy (especially with the principle of “no taxation without representation”)  | 653 |

|                    |  |            |
|--------------------|--|------------|
| 30.3.3.            | EU-related taxes in relationship to “no taxation without representation” in Sweden     | 654        |
| 30.4.              | Conclusion   | 655        |
| Chapter 31: | Switzerland   | 657 |
|                    | Gisela Hürlimann  |            |
| 31.1.              | Introduction   | 657        |
| 31.1.1.            | Taxation in the Old Swiss Confederation (prior to 1800)                                | 658        |
| 31.1.1.1.          | Urban and rural taxation up to the 16th century  | 659        |
| 31.1.1.2.          | Reformation, state revenue, fiscal extraction and resistance up to the 18th century    | 661        |
| 31.2.              | Main tax reforms between 1798 and 1915   | 663        |
| 31.2.1.            | The Helvetic Republic: First attempts at central taxation                              | 664        |
| 31.2.2.            | Cantonal tax sovereignty after 1803 and the slow generalization of direct taxes        | 665        |
| 31.2.3.            | The Swiss federal state, its fiscal policy and impact on cantonal taxation (1848-1915) | 668        |
| 31.2.4.            | Swiss taxation since World War I   | 670        |
| 31.2.4.1.          | In and between the wars: The evolution of Swiss taxation (1915-1945)                   | 670        |
| 31.2.4.2.          | The post-war path of federal taxation (1948-2020)                                      | 674        |
| 31.3.              | Conclusion   | 679        |
| Chapter 32: | Turkey  | 681 |
|                    | Funda Başaran Yavaşlar, Gülsen Güneş, Fatma Gül Karagöz and Sevtap Metin        |            |
| 32.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of Turkey  | 681        |
| 32.1.1.            | The traditional society  | 681        |
| 32.1.2.            | The Ottoman modernization  | 682        |
| 32.1.3.            | The rise of the republic   | 683        |
| 32.1.4.            | The introduction of a multi-party system   | 683        |
| 32.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 684        |
| 32.2.1.            | Repressive taxes in the 20th century   | 684        |

Table of Contents

---

|             |   |     |
|-------------|---|-----|
| 32.2.1.1.   | Repressive taxes and applications during World War II   | 684 |
| 32.2.1.1.1. | A repressive tax inherited from the empire: Road taxes  | 684 |
| 32.2.1.1.2. | A repressive tax on wealth: Varlık Vergisi (capital tax)  | 684 |
| 32.2.1.1.3. | A repressive tax on income: Toprak Mahsulleri Vergisi (tax on agricultural products)                | 686 |
| 32.2.1.2.   | Regulations facilitating repressive tax regulations after military interventions in 1971 and 1982   | 687 |
| 32.2.2.     | Repressive taxes that have contributed significantly to rebellion and revolution against the regime | 688 |
| 32.2.2.1.   | Problems before modernization   | 688 |
| 32.2.2.2.   | Problems during modernization after the Imperial Rescript of Gülhane of 1839                        | 690 |
| 32.2.2.2.1. | Uprisings in the Balkans and the road to the Constitution of 1876                                   | 690 |
| 32.2.2.2.2. | 1841 Niš uprising   | 691 |
| 32.2.2.2.3. | 1847 Toskalik Rebellion in Albania  | 691 |
| 32.2.2.2.4. | 1875 Herzegovina Rebellion  | 691 |
| 32.2.2.2.5. | Tax rebellions in Anatolia  | 692 |
| 32.3.       | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy in Turkey               | 694 |
| 32.3.1.     | Taxes supporting democracy  | 694 |
| 32.3.1.1.   | During the rise of the Turkish republic   | 694 |
| 32.3.1.1.1. | A tax supporting democracy and independence: The Tekâlif-i Milliye Orders                           | 694 |
| 32.3.1.1.2. | Abolishment of aşar (tithe)   | 695 |
| 32.3.1.2.   | Introduction of personal income taxes   | 695 |
| 32.3.1.3.   | Fiscal federalism   | 697 |
| 32.3.2.     | Taxes potentially in conflict with democracy  | 698 |
| 32.3.2.1.   | Taxes influenced by external forces as a consequence of financial crisis                            | 698 |
| 32.3.2.1.1. | Ottoman period  | 698 |
| 32.3.2.1.2. | Republic period   | 699 |
| 32.3.2.2.   | Other taxes potentially in conflict with equality and legality                                      | 700 |
| 32.4.       | Conclusion  | 701 |

---

|                    |  |            |
|--------------------|--|------------|
| Chapter 33: | United Kingdom  | 705 |
|                    | Katherine Cousins and Dominic de Cogan  |            |
| 33.1.              | Introduction to the tax history of the United Kingdom  | 705        |
| 33.2.              | Repressive taxes   | 710        |
| 33.3.              | Taxes supporting democracy and taxes potentially in conflict with democracy                        | 712        |
| 33.3.1.            | Taxes supporting democracy   | 713        |
| 33.3.1.1.          | The introduction of personal income tax  | 713        |
| 33.3.1.2.          | Fiscal federalism  | 716        |
| 33.3.2.            | Taxes in conflict with democracy   | 718        |
| 33.4.              | Conclusion   | 722        |
| Chapter 34: | United States   | 725 |
|                    | William B. Barker   |            |
| 34.1.              | Introduction   | 725        |
| 34.2.              | From colonial America to the birth of a new nation: Taxation and revolution                        | 727        |
| 34.2.1.            | No taxation without representation   | 727        |
| 34.2.1.1.          | The Stamp Act  | 727        |
| 34.2.1.2.          | Townshend Acts   | 728        |
| 34.3.              | The shift from the control of “foreign” imperialism to control by class and faction in US taxation | 730        |
| 34.3.1.            | The context of US federalism   | 730        |
| 34.3.2.            | Shay’s Rebellion   | 731        |
| 34.3.3.            | The Whiskey Rebellion  | 732        |
| 34.3.4.            | The right to vote and taxation   | 734        |
| 34.4.              | The struggle for a national income tax: Classes and regions in conflict                            | 737        |
| 34.4.1.            | Income tax in the United States: Early history   | 737        |
| 34.4.2.            | The mobilization of income taxation  | 738        |
| 34.4.3.            | The US Supreme Court invalidates the income tax  | 739        |
| 34.4.4.            | Pollock’s aftermath  | 741        |

Table of Contents

---

|                  |   |            |
|------------------|---|------------|
| 34.5.            | The dialectics of change: Internal contradictionsat the core of class power over the economic effectof income tax | 745        |
| 34.6.            | Conclusion  | 748        |
|              |   |            |
| Part Four |   |            |
| Appendix  |   |            |
| Appendix: | Questionnaire for National Reports   | 753 |