CONTENTS

About the authors xi

Acknowledgements xii

Using your VitalSource enhanced eBook xiii

Introduction 1

Making sense of mass education 2

Changing contexts of education 3

Some problems with modernist sociologies 4

Beyond modernist sociologies of education 4

The structure of the book 5

PART 1 REASSESSING THE PILLARS OF SOCIOLOGY: MODERN AND POSTMODERN SOCIOLOGIES OF EDUCATION 7

Chapter 1 Social class 10

Introduction 11

Myth #1: Australia is a society characterised by equality 15

Myth #2: Schooling success is only about individual ability 19

Myth #3: Social class is all about money 24

Conclusion 29

Chapter 2 Race, ethnicity and indigeneity 30

Introduction 31

Myth #1: Humanity is naturally divided into races 37

Myth #2: We no longer discriminate on the basis of race or ethnicity 41

Myth #3: Educational outcomes are unaffected by race or ethnicity 46

Myth #4: There is an 'Indigenous problem' in education 48

Conclusion 55

Chapter 3 Gender 57

Introduction 58

Myth #1: Gender is a biological fact, and schools should provide education for girls and boys accordingly 63

Myth #2: Schools are passive spectators to the last remnants of gender inequality 68

Myth #3: Boys are the real victims of the schooling system 76

Conclusion 80

Chapter 4 Sexualities 81

Introduction 82

Myth #1: Sex, sexuality and gender are really the same thing 85

Myth #2: Let kids be kids – sexuality is simply best ignored at school 88

Myth #3: Including diverse sexualities in schools is too hard and too confusing, and will promote gay 'lifestyle' choices 93
Conclusion 99

PART 2 THE FOUNDATIONS OF AN ALTERNATIVE APPROACH: EDUCATION AND GOVERNANCE 101

Chapter 5 Governance 104
Introduction 105
Myth #1: Society has always been simply a collection of individuals 108
Myth #2: Schools are primarily about education, not regulation 111
Myth #3: The structure of the school isn't really that important to the education process 114
Conclusion 118

Chapter 6 Subjectivity 122
Introduction 123
Myth #1: The sole purpose of psychology is to understand the nature of the human mind 125
Myth #2: My conduct may be governed, but my mind remains free 129
Myth #3: Psychology simply discovers new behaviour disorders; it plays no role in creating them 134
Conclusion 137

Chapter 7 Neoliberalism and marketisation 139
Introduction 140
Myth #1: Schools have always been competitive places, acting like 'sharks in a swimming pool' 144
Myth #2: School choice gives every family the right to do what is best for their children 150
Myth #3: Professional standards are the best way of guaranteeing a quality education 156
Conclusion 164

Chapter 8 Pre-adulthood 165
Introduction 166
Myth #1: 'Childhood' and 'youth' are facts of nature 167
Myth #2: The categories of 'childhood' and 'youth' have nothing to do with governance 172
Myth #3: 'Childhood' is characterised by its innocence, 'youth' by its natural resistance to authority 177
Conclusion 181

Chapter 9 Datafication 182
Introduction 183
Myth #1: We need to be globally competitive – data are a great way to make Australian education the best in the world 187
Myth #2: NAPLAN only takes a few days – it isn't a big deal 189
Myth #3: Numbers don't lie – using data increases fairness and education quality 192
Conclusion 202

PART 3 CULTURAL CONTEXTS OF CONTEMPORARY EDUCATION 203

Chapter 10 The media 206
Introduction 207
Myth #1: We do not need pointless subjects such as 'media studies' in our already crowded curriculum 209
Myth #2: With the news media, you don't need to think, you just need to read and listen 213
Myth #3: The media don't create moral panics, but even if they do, this doesn't affect education 219
Conclusion 227

Chapter 11 Popular culture 228
Introduction 229
Myth #1: Popular culture is rubbish – in terms of taste, it's awful; as an object of study, it's irrelevant 232
Myth #2: Teachers need to be up to date with student cultures 238
Myth #3: Popular culture has no place in the classroom 242
Conclusion 246

Chapter 12 Technology 247
Introduction 248
Myth #1: 'Technologies' aren't that important; they don't affect the fundamentals of what it is to be human 253
Myth #2: Digital technology is the answer to all our education problems 258
Myth #3: Technology signals the end of teaching 263
Conclusion 266

Chapter 13 Globalisation 268
Introduction 269
Myth #1: Understanding globalisation is easy; it's simply another word for Americanisation 272
Myth #2: We have an Australian education system here, not any kind of 'globalised' one 277
Myth #3: 'Education for sustainability' has nothing to do with globalisation; it's a politically inspired waste of time 282
Conclusion 287

PART 4 PHILOSOPHY AND MASS EDUCATION 289

Chapter 14 Philosophy 292
Introduction 293
Myth #1: Philosophy has no place in the twenty-first-century curriculum 296
Myth #2: 'Education' is self-evident; we don't need philosophy to explain it 301
Myth #3: Teachers don't need a 'personal philosophy of education' 307
Conclusion 312

Chapter 15 Ethics and the law 313
Introduction 314
Myth #1: Understanding ethics doesn't help you be a good teacher 316

Myth #2: Unlike ethics, the law is straightforward: everyone agrees on what it is and what it does 322
Myth #3: We have an ethical education system; it does not discriminate 326
Myth #4: There are no real ethical dilemmas left for education law to deal with 330
Conclusion 334

Chapter 16 Children's rights 335
Introduction 336
Myth #1: Children and young people have always had rights 338
Myth #2: Children having rights means the rights of others are taken away 343
Myth #3: When it comes to what children need, adults always know best 353
Conclusion 359

Chapter 17 Truth and postcolonialism 360
Introduction 361
Myth #1: 'Truth' is the most straightforward thing there is 364
Myth #2: Given that we haven't been a colony for over 100 years, postcolonial theory has nothing to tell us about ourselves 368
Myth #3: The knowledge in our school curriculum is both true and culturally neutral 373
Conclusion 376

Chapter 18 Alternative education 378
Introduction 379
Myth #1: There are no serious alternatives to traditional mass education 382
Myth #2: If you do choose to stay within the current schooling system, there are no realistic ways to change it significantly for the better 390
Conclusion 398

Conclusion: The central aims of this book 400
The intended approach of this book 401
Finally 401

References 403

Index 443