

Table of contents

Acknowledgements

IX

Transcription conventions

XI

CHAPTER 1

Introduction

1

- 1.1 What CLIL is and why one should study it 1
- 1.2 The relationship of language and content 5
- 1.3 A constructivist and participatory understanding of learning 7
- 1.4 Research questions and goals of this study 9

CHAPTER 2

The classroom as discourse space

15

- 2.1 School lessons: the speech event 18
- 2.2 Roles and scripts: ritual aspects of classroom talk 23
- 2.3 Classroom registers and activity types 27
- 2.4 Whole class interaction and the IRF-cycle 33
- 2.5 Classroom talk as conversation 36
- 2.6 Speech acts and the management of interpersonal relations 38
- 2.7 Genre aspects of classroom talk 40
- 2.8 A multi-perspectival approach 42

CHAPTER 3

The study – setting, methods, data

45

- 3.1 The sociolinguistic and institutional context of CLIL in Austria:
a sketch 45
- 3.2 Research concept 48
- 3.3 Methodological reflections: the researcher and the field in qualitative classroom-based research 57

CHAPTER 4

Content teaching, meaning making and the construction of knowledge

65

- 4.1 Introduction 66
- 4.2 Cornerstones in the analysis of knowledge construction 67
- 4.3 Classroom practices 75
- 4.4 Summary and conclusions 90

CHAPTER 5

Questions in the CLIL classroom

93

- 5.1 Introduction 93
- 5.2 Typologies of classroom questions 95
- 5.3 Quantitative overview of findings 100
- 5.4 Classroom practices 101
- 5.5 Questions and the handling of communication breakdowns 119
- 5.6 Discussion of findings 123

CHAPTER 6

Academic language functions

127

- 6.1 Introduction 127
- 6.2 Definition 131
 - 6.2.1 Defining definitions 131
 - 6.2.2 Classroom practices 132
 - 6.2.3 Discussion of findings on definitions 138
- 6.3 Explanation 139
 - 6.3.1 Operationalizing explanations 139
 - 6.3.2 Structural and functional characteristics of explanations 143
 - 6.3.3 Classroom practices 152
 - 6.3.4 Discussion of findings on explanations 158
- 6.4 Hypothesizing and predicting 159
 - 6.4.1 Operationalizing hypothesizing and predicting 160
 - 6.4.2 Classroom practices 162
 - 6.4.3 Conclusions on hypothesizing 168
- 6.5 Conclusions on academic speech functions 169

CHAPTER 7

Passages of politeness: classroom directives 173

- 7.1 Introduction 173
- 7.2 Conceptual background of the analysis 175
 - 7.2.1 Previous studies of classroom politeness and directives 175
 - 7.2.2 A framework for analysis 178
- 7.3 Quantitative overview of the findings 183
- 7.4 Classroom practices 185
- 7.5 Discussion of findings 197

CHAPTER 8

Conversationalists in the classroom? Repair, feedback and correction 205

- 8.1 Introduction 205
- 8.2 Conceptual framework 208
 - 8.2.1 A sequential view of repair 209
 - 8.2.2 Categories of repairables 217
 - 8.2.3 Data, methods, research questions 220
- 8.3 Classroom practices 221
 - 8.3.1 How frequent is repair in CLIL classrooms? 221
 - 8.3.2 Frequency of repairable types 229
 - 8.3.3 Sequential organization of repair – trajectory types 232
 - 8.3.4 Links between repairable types and repair types 235
 - 8.3.5 Realization of repair initiations by ‘other’ 241
- 8.4 The question of face threat and other factors in repair realization 243
- 8.5 Conclusions 253

CHAPTER 9

The CLIL classroom as a language learning environment 257

- 9.1 Introduction 257
- 9.2 Theoretical approaches to second language learning 258
- 9.3 Stakeholder notions of SLL 265
- 9.4 Theory mapped onto practice: communicative competence in the CLIL lesson speech event 277

CHAPTER 10

Conclusions, implications and prospects 293