Contents

Table of Cases, Laws, and Resolutions xv
List of Abbreviations xxiii

1. Introduction 1
   1. Domestic Accountability in the Shadow of ICTs 3
   2. The (Positive) Complementarity Turn in International Criminal Justice 7
   3. Research Method, Limitations, and Terminology 10
   4. The Case Studies: Rwanda, Sierra Leone, and the DR Congo 14
      4.1. Rwanda: zero-impunity, prosecutions, and traditional justice 14
      4.2. Sierra Leone: amnesty, truth and reconciliation, and prosecutions 15
      4.3. DR Congo: partial amnesty, failed truth-seeking, and prosecutions 16
   5. Book Outline 17

2. The (Positive) Complementarity Turn in International Criminal Justice 20
   1. The Rise and Fall of Domestic Accountability in Time and Space 21
   2. From Subsidiarity to Shadow: Tracing Complementarity's Ascendance 24
   3. The Mechanics of Complementarity as Global Governance 30
   4. Beyond Complementarity: Reimagining Relations with States 35
   5. International Criminal Tribunals, Complementarity, and Statebuilding 38

3. Institutional Design: Regulating Relations between States and ICTs 41
   1. Institutional Design, Concurrent Jurisdiction, and Shadow Effects 41
   2. (International) Primacy 43
      2.1. The original aims 43
      2.2. Nipped in the bud: the false promise of 'open-ended' and 'conditional' primacy 46
      2.3. 'Targeted' (quasi-absolute) primacy over high-level suspects 49
      2.4. The completion strategy and rule 11*bis*: conditionality in action 51
      2.5. Rehabilitating the domestic: from 'conditional' to 'absolute' primacy and back 58
   3. A Hybrid and Restrictive Mandate 59
      3.1. The original aims 60
      3.2. Primacy and rule 11*bis*: law without practice 61

3.3. 'Targeted' primacy: litigating 'greatest responsibility' 63
3.4. Hybrid crimes: insulating the international from domestic scrutiny 67
3.5. Searching for domestic impact: reconciling hybridity with a restrictive mandate 67
4. Complementarity (Domestic Primacy or Subsidiarity) 68
4.1. The original aims 69
4.2. An admissibility framework open to challenge 71
4.3. Avoiding conflict: self-referrals and uncontested admissibility 73
4.4. From conditionality (unable or unwilling) to consensuality (inactivity) 74
4.5. Consolidating international supremacy: 'same case, same conduct' 78
4.6. Importing a restrictive mandate through gravity 82
4.7. Plausible deniability: from conditional admissibility to consensual and targeted quasi-primacy 83
5. Unpacking the Nexus of ICT Institutional Design, International Trials, and Domestic Accountability 86

4. International Intervention and Domestic Prosecutions 90
1. Introduction 90
2. The International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda 91
2.1. Early prosecutorial strategy: investigations 'all over the place' 91
2.2. Open-ended primacy in action: dissuasive or iterative competition? 93
2.3. ICTR versus Kagame: probing the coercive limits of primacy 98
2.4. Rule 11*bis*: foregrounding the iterative potential of primacy 105
2.5. Unpacking primacy's effects on domestic prosecutions 107
3. The Special Court for Sierra Leone 110
3.1. Prosecutorial strategy: targeted or target-driven? 110
3.2. The SCSL and domestic prosecutions: neutral or dissuasive? 114
3.3. Failed iteration: amnesty repeal, rule 11*bis*, and drawdown 118
3.4. Unpacking a restrictive mandate's effects on domestic prosecutions 122
4. The International Criminal Court 125
4.1. Prosecutorial strategy: imbuing complementarity with (extralegal) meaning 125
4.2. Complementarity in action: trading iteration for accommodation 128
4.3. In the ICC's shadow: NGO justice and the rise of human rights prosecutions 132
4.4. Inadmissibility in reverse: complementarity as pretext for ICC inaction 135
4.5. Unpacking complementarity's effects on domestic prosecutions 139
5. Interim Conclusion: Domestic Prosecutions in the Court's Shadow 142

5. International Intervention and Capacity Building 147
1. Introduction 147
2. The International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda 148
2.1. Specialist genocide courts and the waning shadow of international influence 148

2.2. Gacaca: challenging international oversight 152
2.3. In the ICTR's shadow: rule 11*bis*, iteration, and two-tier justice 155
2.4. Unfulfilled legacy? Penitentiary reform in Rwanda 160
2.5. Unpacking primacy's effects on capacity building 162
3. The Special Court for Sierra Leone 165
3.1. 'Hybridity', legacy (building), and 'demonstration effects' 165
3.2. Hybrid staffing: a missed opportunity for iteration? 167
3.3. Legacy in action: witness protection, training, and penitentiary reform 170
3.4. Beyond the call of legacy: legal aid and anti-corruption 172
3.5. Unpacking a hybrid mandate's effects on capacity building 175
4. The International Criminal Court 178
4.1. Mobilizing the ICC's symbolic shadow: mobile courts and prosecution support cells 178
4.2. Military or civilian justice? Unpacking Congo's jurisdictional turf wars 182
4.3. The struggle for a hybrid court: walking the iteration–isolation tightrope 184
4.4. Positive complementarity (in)action: capacity building with(out) the court? 189
4.5. Deromanticizing domestic justice: how able was/is the Congolese judiciary? 190
4.6. Unpacking complementarity's effects on capacity building 193
5. Interim Conclusion: Capacity Building in the Court's Shadow 196

6. International Intervention and Norm Internalization 200
1. Introduction 200
2. The International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda 201
2.1. Domesticating genocide: keeping internationals at bay 201
2.2. Rule 11*bis* and norm dissemination: catalyst or epiphenomenon? 206
2.3. Iteration in action: abolition of the death penalty 207
2.4. Normative mix(-up)? A common law fair trial in the civil law's shadow 210
2.5. In the ICTR's shadow: what counts as a fair domestic trial? 212
2.6. Unpacking primacy's effects on norm internalization 216
3. The Special Court for Sierra Leone 218
3.1. Charging domestic crimes: a missed opportunity for iteration? 218
3.2. Domesticating international crimes: international indifference, domestic obstinance, or calculated neglect? 220
3.3. The death penalty: probing the limits of international influence 224
3.4. The SCSL's incomplete shadow: ordinary criminal justice practice 226
3.5. 'No one is above the law': the normative paradox of 'greatest responsibility'? 228
3.6. Unpacking a hybrid/restrictive mandate's effects on norm internalization 230

4. The International Criminal Court 232
4.1. Joining the ICC club: Congo as a battleground for legislative reform 232
4.2. Complementarity circumvented: direct application of the Rome Statute and fair trial compliance 236
4.3. Interrogating complementarity's purpose: domestic (re)trials of ICC defendants 239
4.4. Domesticating the Rome Statute: epiphenomenal complementarity 240
4.5. Rome's anti-impunity shadow: displacing amnesty and immunity 242
4.6. The shadow side of article 17: unintended diversionary complementarity 246
4.7. Unpacking complementarity's effects on norm internalization 251
5. Interim Conclusion: Norm Internalization in the Court's Shadow 253

7. In the Court's Shadow: Maximizing Accountability in Unwilling or Unable States 258
1. The (Positive) Complementarity Turn: Situating the ICC in a Decentralized and Opportunistic System of Global Justice 258
2. Three General Trends 260
2.1. From top-down coercion to bottom-up persuasion: complementarity as cooperation 260
2.2. Unintended diversionary complementarity in the Court's symbolic shadow 264
2.3. From investigation to preliminary examination (and back?) 267
3. Three Intervening Factors 271
3.1. Temporal factors: a double-edged sword 271
3.2. Bridging capacity and political will: disaggregating the 'black box' of the 'unable or unwilling' state 276
3.3. Prosecutorial leadership: between arrogance and risk-averseness 279
4. Searching for Shadows 281
4.1. Reimagining the aims and addressees of international criminal justice 282
4.2. Rethinking institutional design and (positive) complementarity 285
4.3. From accommodation to iteration: enacting relationality at ICTs 288

Epilogue: Interrogating the Ideology of (Positive) Complementarity: Should the Future of International Criminal Justice Be Domestic? 295

Bibliography 299
Index 335