

Contents

World Perspectives viii

Foreword xviii

About the Author xx

Introduction: The Great Promise, its Failure, and New Alternatives 1

The end of an illusion 1

Why did the Great Promise fail? 3

The economic necessity for human change 7

Is there an alternative to catastrophe? 8

Part One Understanding the Difference Between Having and Being 11

1 A First Glance 13

The importance of the difference between having and being 13

Examples in various poetic expressions 14

Idiomatic changes 17

Origin of the terms 20

Philosophical concepts of being 21

Having and consuming 22

2 Having and Being in Daily Experience 25

Learning 25

Remembering 27

Conversing 29
Reading 30
Exercising authority 32
Having knowledge and knowing 34
Faith 36
Loving 38

3 Having and Being in the Old and New Testaments
and in the Writings of Master Eckhart 41

The Old Testament 41
The New Testament 46
Master Eckhart (1260-c. 1327) 50

Part Two Analyzing the Fundamental Differences Between the Two Modes of Existence 57

4 What is the Having Mode? 59

The Acquisitive Society—basis for the having mode 59
The nature of having 65
Other factors supporting the having mode 69
The having mode and the anal character 70
Asceticism and equality 71
Existential having 72

5 What is the Being Mode? 75

Being active 76
Activity and passivity 77
Being as reality 83
The will to give, to share, to sacrifice 86

6 Further Aspects of Having and Being 93

Security—insecurity 93
Solidarity—antagonism 95

- Joy—pleasure 100
- Sin and forgiveness 103
- Fear of dying—affirmation of living 107
- Here, now—past, future 109

Part Three The New Man and the New Society 113

7 Religion, Character, and Society 115

- The foundations of social character 115
- Social character and “religious” needs 116
- Is the Western World Christian? 120
- The humanist protest 132

8 Conditions for Human Change and the Features of the New Man 145

- The new Man 147

9 Features of the New Society 151

- A new science of man 151
- The new society: Is there a reasonable chance? 171

Bibliography 177

Index 183