

Contents

Preface

Part 1 Self and Society in Social Theory

1 Introduction

Why belonging?

A relational view of self and society

Understanding social change

Why 'belonging' rather than 'identity'?

The structure of this book

2 Where It All Began: The Sociological Classics

Introduction: from traditional to modern selves

Marx on alienation

A short interlude: from Gemeinschaft to Gesellschaft

Durkheim on anomie

Weber on the strictures of rationalization

Conclusion

3 The Loss of Tradition: Diminished or Reflexive Selves?

Introduction

Vulnerable, fragmented selves

Were things so good in the past?

Reflexive and individualized selves

The gendered and classed limits of reflexivity

Have things really changed so much?

Monadic selves

Thing-like structures

Conclusion

4 The Relationship Between Self and Society

Introduction

A relational society

Social order in the making

What are social structures?

Cooley and Mead on the relational self

Becoming a moral self xi

1

3

3

4

5

7

10

12

12

13

15

15

18

20

22

22

23

27

28

31

33

35

36

37

39

39

41

42

43

43

47

vii

Bourdieu on habitus	49
Goffman on presenting an acceptable self	51
Cynical performers?	52
New twists in the presentations of self?	54
Social change	55
Conclusion	56
5 Everyday Personal Life	58
Introduction	58
Phenomenology	58
An everyday world structured by power relations	60
Sociology of everyday life	63
Different spheres?	64
The extraordinary everyday	66
The potential for change	68
The mindful body	69
Haptic perception	71
Learning how to perceive	72
Tacit knowledge	73
Conclusion	73
Part 2 Self, Belonging and Social Change	75
6 Belonging: A Window into Social Change	77
Introduction	77
Defining belonging	78
The need to belong	79
Knowing the 'rules of the game'	81
Home	82
Belonging and power	83
Is belonging an ideal state?	86
Dynamic belonging in the everyday	88
Multidimensional belongings	90
The emotions of belonging	91
Conclusion	93
7 Cultural Belongings	95
Introduction	95
The meaning of 'culture'	96
Drawing boundaries	98
'Ideal types' versus categories in practice	99
The use of shared cultural products	100
Culture as 'tradition'	103
Contested belongings	104
Nationhood	105

Migration and local belongings	107
Multiple belongings and hybrid cultures	109
Conclusion	112
8 Relational Belongings	113
Introduction	113
Family	114
Friends	115
Acquaintances	117
Strangers	118
Belonging in neighbourhoods	121
Community	122
From given to chosen communities	123
In-groups and out-groups: creating a community	125
Relational belongings in an age of mobile technologies	126
Conclusion	129
9 Sensory Belongings	131
Introduction	131
Body hexis and habitual spaces	132
The senses and belonging	133
The comfort of food	136
Place as embodied experience	138
Emplaced selves	141
Belonging to place	142
Power and inequalities	143
Material objects	144
Making a 'home' with objects	145
Changing material worlds	146
Sensuous markers and sensescales	147
Conclusion	148
10 Conclusion: Self and Belonging in a Changing World	150
Introduction	150
The fragmentary experience of social change	151
Belonging as a multimodal enmeshment	152
The politics and ethics of belonging	153
Glossary	155
Bibliography	160
Index	175