

Contents

|  |           |
|--|-----------|
| Acknowledgements   | xi        |
| About the author   | xiii      |
| 1 From mixed methods to an integrated methodology     | 1  |
| Introduction   | 1         |
| Rejecting a traditional dichotomy                            | 2         |
| Frameworks   | 3         |
| The structure of the book                                    | 4         |
| Associated reading   | 5         |
| 2 The FraIM: Frameworks for an Integrated Methodology | 6  |
| Introduction   | 6         |
| Explaining the FraIM   | 8         |
| The research question  | 8         |
| The cases  | 14        |
| Methods of data collection                                   | 15        |
| Data   | 17        |
| Data analysis  | 18        |
| A synthesis  | 18        |
| Conclusion   | 21        |
| Reflections  | 21        |
| Associated reading   | 21        |
| 3 Case selection: data source management              | 23 |
| Introduction   | 23        |
| Data sources   | 24        |
| Number of cases in your research                             | 24        |
| Degree of control  | 26        |
| Ecological validity  | 30        |
| Generalisability   | 30        |
| Integrating data sources                                     | 31        |
| Conclusion   | 34        |
| Reflections  | 35        |
| Associated reading   | 35        |
| 4 Case selection: integrated sampling                 | 36 |
| Introduction   | 36        |
| Types of sampling  | 38        |

|   |           |
|---|-----------|
| Integrating data source management with case selection                      | 44        |
| Conclusion  | 44        |
| Reflections   | 45        |
| Associated reading  | 48        |
| 5 Data collection: an overview                                       | 49 |
| Introduction  | 49        |
| Level of mediation  | 50        |
| An unfolding sequence   | 52        |
| Degree of structure   | 54        |
| Degree of structure: asking questions                                       | 54        |
| Degree of structure: observation and artefact analysis                      | 57        |
| Specific approaches associated with degree of structure                     | 60        |
| Conclusion  | 62        |
| Reflections   | 62        |
| Associated reading  | 62        |
| 6 Observation  | 63 |
| Introduction  | 63        |
| Using the FraIM   | 64        |
| Different senses  | 64        |
| Types of observational research   | 66        |
| Examples of observational research  | 68        |
| Advantages and disadvantages of different observer-participant interactions | 69        |
| Ethical issues  | 72        |
| Degree of structure   | 72        |
| Integrating approaches  | 73        |
| Conclusion  | 76        |
| Reflections   | 77        |
| Associated reading  | 77        |
| 7 Asking questions   | 78 |
| Introduction  | 78        |
| Written questions   | 78        |
| Spoken questions  | 83        |
| Integration of approaches to asking questions                               | 84        |
| Degree of structure   | 85        |
| Pilot your questions  | 88        |
| Conclusion  | 89        |
| Reflections   | 90        |
| Associated reading  | 90        |

|           |   |            |
|-----------|---|------------|
| 8  | Analysing artefacts I                            | 91  |
|           | Introduction  | 91         |
|           | What is an artefact?                                    | 92         |
|           | Characteristics of artefacts                            | 93         |
|           | Example of the four levels                              | 95         |
|           | What is artefact analysis?                              | 97         |
|           | Less structured approaches: semiotic analysis           | 97         |
|           | Less structured approaches: discourse analysis          | 101        |
|           | Conclusion  | 105        |
|           | Reflections   | 105        |
|           | Associated reading                                      | 105        |
| 9  | Analysing artefacts II                           | 107 |
|           | Introduction  | 107        |
|           | A structured approach to artefact analysis              | 107        |
|           | Artefact analysis and the FraIM                         | 109        |
|           | Inference and abduction                                 | 112        |
|           | An example of integration                               | 113        |
|           | Conclusion  | 117        |
|           | Reflections   | 118        |
|           | Associated reading                                      | 118        |
| 10 | Data integration                                 | 119 |
|           | Introduction  | 119        |
|           | Two types of data?                                      | 119        |
|           | Levels and types of data                                | 121        |
|           | Illustrative example of data levels                     | 125        |
|           | Data transformation                                     | 127        |
|           | Data enlargement  | 128        |
|           | Data reduction  | 129        |
|           | Further issues  | 131        |
|           | Conclusion  | 132        |
|           | Reflections   | 132        |
|           | Associated reading                                      | 133        |
| 11 | Warrantable research: using the FraIM as a guide | 134 |
|           | Introduction  | 134        |
|           | Warrantable research based on argument                  | 136        |
|           | Warrantable research and the FraIM                      | 138        |
|           | An example  | 140        |
|           | Conclusion  | 146        |
|           | Reflections   | 147        |
|           | Associated reading                                      | 148        |

|  |            |
|--|------------|
| 12 Ethical issues in participant-centred research   | 149 |
| Introduction   | 149        |
| What is ethics?  | 149        |
| Why researchers need to take ethics into account           | 151        |
| Ethics and research participants                           | 155        |
| Conclusion   | 159        |
| Reflections  | 159        |
| Associated reading   | 159        |
| 13 Wider ethical issues and the FraIM               | 160 |
| Introduction   | 160        |
| The research question                                      | 160        |
| Context  | 161        |
| Methods of data collection                                 | 168        |
| Data and data analysis                                     | 169        |
| Writing and disseminating the research report              | 170        |
| A guiding framework  | 171        |
| Summary of expected ethicality                             | 171        |
| Conclusion   | 174        |
| Reflections  | 175        |
| Associated reading   | 175        |
| 14 Holistic integrationism: philosophising research | 176 |
| Introduction   | 176        |
| Paradigms  | 177        |
| Two realities?   | 178        |
| Polarised paradigms  | 178        |
| Philosophy is not relevant?                                | 179        |
| Paradigmatic reconciliation?                               | 180        |
| A more radical possibility                                 | 181        |
| An alternative paradigm                                    | 182        |
| An integrated framework for research                       | 184        |
| Conclusion   | 186        |
| Reflections  | 186        |
| Associated reading   | 187        |
| 15 A few final words                                | 188 |
| An integrated methodology                                  | 188        |
| Conceptual considerations                                  | 189        |
| So, finally...   | 190        |
| References  | 191        |
| Name index  | 197        |
| Subject index                                       | 199        |