

Contents

Preface	iii
Biographical notes	ix
1 Management and the relevance of the behavioural sciences	1
What is management? What managers do? The effective manager. Is effectiveness enough? The relevance of behavioural science. Management and Behavioural Science. Conclusion – the way forward in this book. [Roger Bennett]
2 The meaning of work	18
Work and the individual. Work meanings and gender. The meaning of non-work – unemployment. Work meanings: The decline of the work ethic? [James Curran and John Stanworth]
3 The individual at work	39
Individual differences. Designing work for people. [Paul Lyons]
4 Motivation at work	64
The meaning of motivation. A basic model of motivation. Approaches to motivation. Work-based approaches. Applications of motivation theory. [Roger Bennett]
5 Interaction with others	97
The nature of social interaction. Non-verbal communication. Self-knowledge. Learning in groups. Transactional analysis. Assertiveness. Leadership skills. Counselling. Bargaining and negotiation. Interviewing. Rating. [Paul Lyons].

- 6 Working in groups 117
Why groups are important. What is a 'group'? What sort of groups are we concerned with? The functions groups perform. How groups develop. What happens in a group? Communication. Improving the performance of groups, committees and teams. Summary – factors affecting group behaviour. [Roger Bennett]
- 7 From occupational role to the labour process 149
Entering the occupational role. In the work role. Labour process analysis. [James Curran and John Stanworth]
- 8 The organisation of work 173
The scientific management movement. Human relations. Bureaucracy. Technology and behaviour at work. The systems approach. Socio-technical systems. Contingency theory. Ways of classifying organisations. Limitations to systems theory. Matrix and project structures. Divisionalisations and the trend to decentralisation. [Alan Cowling]
- 9 Power, authority and conflict 196
Definition of power. Sources of personal power. Departmental power. Decision-making and organisational politics. Politics and power. Power and structures. The legitimisation of power and authority. Conflict and the organisation. [Alan Cowling]
- 10 Changing organisations 222
The challenge of change. Forces of change. Resistance to change. Group pressures and organisation structures. Understanding change. Action research. Organisation development: the 1940s and 1950s. Organisation development: the 1960s. Organisation development: the 1970s. Organisation development: the 1980s. OD methods in the 1980s. Culture and organisational change. [Paul Lyons and Alan Cowling]
- 11 The small firm – A neglected area of management 248
The importance of the small firm to the economy. What is a small firm. The owner–manager and the self-employed. Employment in the small enterprise. Industrial relations. The small firm and growth. The future of the small firm in industrial society. Conclusions. [James Curran and John Stanworth]