

Contents

Acknowledgments	vii
List of abbreviations	viii
Introduction	1
1 Foreign policy and politics of identity	12
1.1 Introduction	12
1.2 Representations of identity in foreign policy	13
1.3 Of sedimentary origins: language and intertexts	21
PART I
Shadows of the past	37
2 Overtones	39
2.1 Preoccupation with the past	39
2.2 Foreign policy traditions	47
2.3 Entrenched concepts	55
3 Undertones	71
3.1 Ideas and ideological contours	71
3.2 "Native intuitions": history as a source of insecurity	81
3.3 "Thousand-year-old history": pride and confidence	90

PART II

History of the present

101

4 Subjective structure

103

4.1 Introduction: Russia and the European Union—grounding in context, dealing with notions and approaches 103

4.2 Politics of identity or identity of politics? 104

4.3 Russia vis-à-vis the European Union: a troubled relationship 108

4.4 Balance of power and the return of Eurasia 116

5 Global impacts

131

5.1 Russia and the European Union: realigning the global 131

5.2 Russia and the EU in a multipolar world 133

5.3 Engagement in global affairs 141

Conclusion

152

References

161

Index

174