

Contents

Acknowledgments	ix
1. A Framework for Analysis of the Antitrust–Intellectual Property Intersection	1
1.1 Introduction	1
1.2 The Factual Scope of the Interface	2
1.3 The Historical Context of the Antitrust–IP Cusp	4
1.4 Theoretical Aspects of the Interface	6
1.4.1 Policy Goals of the Two Institutions	6
1.4.2 The Methodologies of the Two Institutions	16
1.4.3 Some Thoughts about Colliding Goals and Methods	25
1.5 Conclusion	26
2. The Austrian Economics Solution and the Property Narrative	38
2.1 Introduction	38
2.2 The Austrian Economics View of Competition	38
2.2.1 Austrian Economics: a Pragmatic Doctrine	39
2.2.2 The Inherent Dynamic Nature of ‘Austrian’ Competition	40
2.2.3 The Role of Entrepreneurship in Austrian Competition	44
2.2.4 On the Fallacies of the Neoclassical Competition Model	45
2.3 Notions Narrowing the IP–Antitrust Conflict	48
2.3.1 Austrian Economics Drawing Competition and Innovation Together	48
2.3.2 The Faults of the IP Mechanism	49
2.4 The Property Narrative of the Antitrust–IP Conflict	52
2.4.1 The Property Account of Antitrust	52
2.4.2 The Property Account of Intellectual Property	60
2.4.3 Implications of the Property Narrative	64
2.4.4 Some Thoughts Arising From the Property Narratives Conflict	67
3. The Dynamic Antitrust Analysis Model	80
3.1 Introduction	80
3.2 The Untold Austrian Assumptions	81
3.2.1 Dynamic (Time) Notions	84

3.2.2	Uncertainty (Ignorance) Notions	87
3.2.3	Prerequisite Circumstantial Assumptions Distinguished from End Results of the Competitive Process	89
3.3	The Dynamic Analysis	90
3.3.1	Different Monopoly Concepts	90
3.3.2	Dynamic Antitrust Analysis	92
3.4	Placing the Property Narratives within the Dynamic Antitrust Paradigm	103
3.4.1	Intellectual Property Rights	104
3.4.2	The Antitrust Rights	104
3.5	Conclusion	108
4.	Application of the Dynamic Model on Refusal to License Intellectual Property (Magill)	118
4.1	Introduction	119
4.2	Preliminary Notions	123
4.2.1	Refusal to Deal versus Refusal to License	123
4.2.2	The Distinction between Existence of an IPR and Its Exercise	124
4.3	Refusal To License: the Magill Case	126
4.3.1	Magill Case: Findings of Fact	127
4.3.2	Magill Case: Findings of Law	129
4.3.3	Magill Case: Dynamic Analysis	133
4.3.4	Fitting the Dynamic Analysis into the Framework of EC Law	146
4.3.5	Economic Dependence versus Insulation from Competition	147
4.3.6	Advantages of Dynamic Analysis in Refusal to License Contexts	149
4.4	Conclusion	153
5.	Application of the Dynamic Model in Network Industries (the Dell Case)	166
5.1	Introduction	166
5.2	Introducing Network Industries, their Competitive Patterns and Standards	166
5.3	Existing Antitrust Jurisprudence on Network Industries	169
5.3.1	Applicability of Antitrust Policy	170
5.3.2	Static Market Power	171
5.3.3	Lock-in Arguments	171
5.3.4	Summary	173
5.4	Dynamic Evaluation of the Effects of Standards on the Competitive Process	173
5.4.1	Arguments on Pro-competitive Aspects of Standards	174
5.4.2	Arguments on Anticompetitive Effects of Standards	179

5.4.3	Summary	182
5.5	From Theory to Practice: the Dell Case	183
5.5.1	The Dell Case Facts	183
5.5.2	Dell: Legal Setting of the Complaint	185
5.6	The Dell Case: a Dynamic Analysis	189
5.6.1	A Review of the FTC Dell Decision	189
5.6.2	Dynamic Analysis of the Dell Fact Pattern	191
5.7	Conclusion	199
	Postscript	208
	Bibliography	210
	Index	239